EXPECT THE NEW YORK DELEGATION TO SWING IN LINE FOR SPEAKER

BALTIMORE, June 28.—Ollie Jamess, permanent chairman of the Democratic National Convention, speaking as a delegate from Kentucky, today predicted the nomination of Champ Clark for on the second ballot. Chairman James made it very plain before he made his comment that he was speaking as a member of the Kentucky delegation and not as the chairman of the convention.

"CLARK ON SECOND BALLOT."

"Clark on the next ballot, witness the confirmation sentence at 4 o'clock this afternoon. As he say it looks to me," Ike said. "I am speaking you understand, merely as a member of the Kentucky delegation here, and the delegation is instructed for Clark. Of course, I need not say that I also feel a keen mind no prophet, and that this guesswork I am doing might go wrong. Bear down what I am able to infer as to the reversal of things, there is no one else to be put except Clark. I understand, my state is instructed for Clark. But aside from that and speaking only as a member of that delegation, I believe I am doing it in an absolutely fair-minded way when I say that there is nothing to it but Clark."

Dark Horse Gossip

"The one row is for a dark horse and the cohort be narrowed down to a choice between Kern or Gaynor," said P. L. Hall, national committeeman from Nebraska and right hand man of Colonel Bryan, today. "I am basing this opinion on a close study of the situation as outlined by developments which have thus far occurred.

"All other candidates, and this includes Clark, Wilson and Underwood, seem to have been eliminated. Clark spent his strength on the first ballot and from now on will grow weaker. Wilson and some of the others may grow a little stronger as the balloting progresses, but it will be a feeble strength and none of the candidates will gather enough power to win.

"Both Kern and Gaynor are acceptable to all factions of the Democracy, especially Gaynor, who is growing visibly stronger to the Western states, where the delegates are very friendly toward him."

Immediately following the adjournment of the convention this morning, the Clark men went into conference, claiming they would force the Speaker's nomination for the President on either the second or third ballot. They said, they said, assurance that New York's ninety would go to them just as soon as it is certain they will be sufficient to force Clark's nomination.

Leaders in Conference.

Charles F. Murphy of New York, Roger Sullivan of Illinois and Thomas Taggart of Indiana also held a conference after the adjournment, in an effort to agree on a candidate on which to unite on the second ballot.

No agreement was reached and the conferees went to bed with the understanding that they would confer again afternoon.

Many of the wiseacres say the contention to far-fetched a desire to cut battle in which the chances of a "dark horse" nominee are far greater than anticipated.

Convene Again at 3 p. m.

After one fruitless joint following an all-night session the convention at 7:10 a. m. adjourned until 4 o'clock this afternoon, when the great struggle for the presidential nomination will be resumed. In the first ballot there was neither sign nor token of what would be the last chapter of the story. Votes were cast for right, men. The total columns showed under the several candidates these figures:

Clark, 440½; Wilson, 324; Underwood, 117½; Harmon, 148; Marshall, 31; Baldwin, 22; Bryan, 1; Sulzer, 2. Absent, 1; not voting, 1.

And in this line of totals there was no radical departure from the estimated number of votes cast out by the National News Association yesterday and no changes that could be made the basis for a new deduction on the face of the actual figures. The net result of the balloting was that all of the elements of the convention were left intact and unbroken in strength, and it was accepted that something would have

HEAR 'GOLD PREMIUM' L STRIKER

Matthew E. McCarthy, an Elevated striker, for twenty-five years an employe of the Boston Elevated Railway, and one of the "gold premium" men, without a black mark, testified under oath before the State Board of Arbitration today that the union of Elevated employes was from within their own ranks and did not originate from outside.

The Elevated has asserted that the union, to which it objects, was organized by outside leaders and would not have been taken up by the men but for that outside impetus.

Questioning along this line, James H. Vahey, counsel for the strikers, asked McCarthy:

"How did you come to start a union in this city, through outside influence?"

"We sent to the International Union and asked them to furnish us with organizers in Boston," said McCarthy. "The whole thing started among employes of the Elevated road here."

Asked for Organizers.

McCarthy was under oath and Chairman Howland of the commission immediately asked: "How do you know that?" referring to the witness' declaration that the employes started among themselves to unionize.

"I wrote to General President Mahon of Detroit," said McCarthy, "the letter asking him to send the organizers here and I signed the letter in person."

"Why did they want a union in Boston? Weren't you being treated all right?" asked Mr. Vahey.

McCarthy, speaking without hesitation, replied: "No. We weren't. I wanted to see a union so we might get better wages and better working conditions."

McCarthy had previously testified that he was an Elevated conductor, that he had worked for the company twenty-five years lacking four days when he was discharged, as he said, for joining the union.

He swore that he was enrolled in the union May 20 and that the next day Inspector Leonard told him he was "marked for discharge for taking too active part in the union agitation."

He said he was discharged on May 22, the second day after being enrolled in the union.

"Inspector Leonard," testified McCarthy, "met me on the street and asked me where I was going. I told him I was going to a barber shop. He said: 'That story doesn't go. You're going to a union meeting.'

Marked for Discharge.

"He also told me that I was marked for discharge for taking too active a part in the union agitation. Then he said that if I would go to Brother Cullinan's house and report who was there and what they said he would try to save me for my family's sake.

"I went toward Cullinan's house later and saw Leonard and four other bosses scattered around the house watching to see who went in and taking every man's name as he entered. We then postponed that meeting, and met in Revere, so as to evade the spies the company had placed on us."

McCarthy swore that he had drawn the "gold premium" money for satisfactory

LOVE TRAGEDY NEW THEORY IN RIVER MYSTERY

WOONSOCKET, June 28.—The man who killed the unidentified woman whose headless body was found Tuesday by Eugene Jacobs in the Blackstone River, close to the shore of Dame Grove, is thought by the police to have another homicide to his credit—that of a man killed since the woman was beheaded, about two months ago.

If this startling hypothesis of a double tragedy, growing out of a love affair, is correct—and the police declare it looks most promising—they can put their hands on the assassin without fear of his escape.

The authorities say they are convinced by today's developments that the slayer and the victims were all residents of Woonsocket, and that vengeance, prompted by jealousy, was the motive.

The men fought over the girl and the one crossed in love is thought to have first put his old sweetheart out of the way and then his rival a few weeks later.

The police admit that this is their latest and most likely theory, but because of the incomplete status of their investigations further facts as to names and the other tragedy cannot be disclosed at this time.

The possibility of a slipup or error makes secrecy and caution urgent.

The oddest feature is the peculiar situation, according to the police, of feeling more certain of the alleged murderer than of the identity of his woman victim, to establish which the investigators are today bending their every energy.

Theory after theory has been exploded as fast as it bobbed up within the last three days, but the latest one, which involves the other death case, is held to be more tenable than any yet considered.

POLO GROUNDS, New York, June 28.—The Pilgrims blew into town this morning for a series with the Giants. McGraw hoped to fatten up his percentage column at the expense of the tail-enders, but the Pilgrims, aroused by sharp criticisms in Boston, were out to try to pick up one or two of the series, after having broken even with Brooklyn. The two teams opened today with a double header.

KAISER PINS ORDER ON ALLISON ARMOUR

BERLIN, June 28.—Allison Armour, the millionaire American yachtsman, today was invested by Emperor William with the Order of the Red Eagle of the second class. The Emperor went on board Mr. Armour's yacht, the Utowana, and pinned the decoration on the American's coat.

TURKS LOSE 500 IN DEFEAT AT SISI HAID

ROME, June 28.—The Italians have captured the Turkish intrenchments at Sisi Haid, with the loss of but eighteen men, according to a telegram received today. The Turks lost 500 killed and wounded.

Mrs. Taft, Wife of the President, an Interested Spectator at the Big Democratic Convention

Mrs. Taft is seen in the gallery of armory where the convention is being held at Baltimore. She is in a regular hotbed of Democracy, for she is seated between Mrs. Norman E. Mack, wife of the chairman of the Democratic National Committee (on the left), and Mrs. Bruce Wallace, wife of a Democratic delegate from the State of Washington. Mrs. Wallace is a daughter of the late Chief Justice Fuller.

MRS. BENNETT GETS DIVORCE

Mrs. Edith I. Bennett, the wife of Dr. Frederick S. Bennett, of No. 456 Centre street, Jamaica Plain, who sued her husband for divorce on the grounds of cruel and abusive treatment, was granted a decree nisi by Judge Jeaney today. She was given the custody of her little daughter, Gertrude F. Bennett.

The court allowed Mrs. Bennett to take the child out of the jurisdiction of the State from October 1 to June of each year. The mother is always to have the custody of the little girl. During the rest of the year, Dr. Bennett is allowed to have the child for one day each week with the stipulation that he is to return her to Mrs. Bennett before dark on that day.

Mrs. Bennett is also to care for the child's education. No mention is made of alimony.

The case was heard last Wednesday. Mrs. Bennett filed a lengthy list of specifications against her husband, in the form of a diary. In this diary she set forth a peculiar system of fines for everything she did that was not to the liking of her husband.

WOMEN IN NEW WINDOW SMASHING

LONDON, June 28.—Suffragettes began raiding government property in the suburbs today. They smashed the windows in the postoffice building at Hitchin, and then moved on the postoffice at Letchworth. One was arrested.

Constantino Stabs Singer Accidentally, and Victim Is Dying

Signor Gravino, a member of Florencio Constantino's opera troupe, is believed to be dying in New Orleans, according to a dispatch from that city today, from the effect of an accidental sword thrust in the eye inflicted by Constantino who aimed badly when he thrust.

A brain hemorrhage followed. The performance was stopped. Physicians found that paralysis was setting in.

The injury was inflicted last night during the performance of Constantino's company. Constantino, who sings the principal tenor roles in his company, was required by his part to pretend to stab Gravino.

Constantino is the celebrated Spanish tenor of the Boston Opera Company. He organized a grand opera troupe at the close of the 1911-12 season for an American tour.

CLARK GOES TO BED DURING BALLOTING

WASHINGTON, June 28.—Speaker Clark was not kept awake last night by the balloting at Baltimore. He remained up only a little past his usual retiring hour and long before the delegates were casting votes for him, he was at home fast asleep and did not know that he had led on the first ballot until this morning when the newsboys were shouting "Extra." The Yankees or anybody else.

FENWAY PARK, June 28.—A great crowd came out to Fenway Park this afternoon to have their first glimpse of the Red Sox as leaders of the American League pennant race. They were attracted by a double bill, too, the New York Yankees being booked to play off one of the three postponed games here.

The first struggle began at 2 o'clock and was the regular contest booked for today. The second, scheduled for 4 o'clock, was the game which should have been played on the opening day of the American League season in Boston—April 18.

The old favorites were given a rousing reception when they appeared on the field. Like Budd counted on fickle both of the games and the crowd was not the usually generous looking gathering. They wanted the Sox to show no mercy towards either

Jack Sheehan, Referee, to Referee the Revere Mix-up

The Revere "fire fight" is getting to look like the real squared circle article.

Today there's a real referee for the bout that has split the town's fire fighters, and practically all the other Revere voters into two factions. Jack Sheehan, known the country over as a referee in pugilistic events, has been chosen by the dozen, though deposed board of fire engineers to probe the row with the selectmen over the appointment of an acting fire chief.

Referee Sheehan has taken charge of all records, and official papers of the department. After making his investigation he is to write out a report and submit at a public hearing on July 5.

All the "fire fight" fans have sat up and taken notice since Sheehan was picked for the job of special investigator. Here is what Sheehan himself says about his new job:

"I have refereed a great many fights, but never have I been asked up to one so unfair and exciting as this."

MAN IS STABBED TO DEATH AFTER A LOVE QUARREL

PROVIDENCE, June 28.—Antonio Trigiano of Bristol was found stabbed to death in a field in that town today. His loaded revolver was at his feet. His assailant evidently was too quick for Trigiano to shoot.

A love affair, with Trigiano as the rejected suitor, is said by the police to be back of the murder.

Trigiano was stabbed twice in the chest and once in the temple.

The police say that Trigiano courted a Providence girl who preferred another man.

The body was found by Frank Cabral at the foot of Wood street, Bristol is eight miles south of here. Trigiano was twenty-seven years old.

PERKINS HELPS PLAN TO RAISE ROOSEVELT FUND

OYSTER BAY, June 28. The financial backing of Colonel Roosevelt's third party was taken up at a conference at Sagamore Hill with George W. Perkins. The colonel got the assurance that funds will not be lacking to push his candidacy. Perkins was the chief contributor to the Colonel's primary campaign, which cost more than $300,000. The ex-President was informed that if he needs twice that much to further his independent boom it will be provided.

TOWELS STIR UP CHELSEA POLICEMEN

A towel revolution threatens in Chelsea police department. Since the new law went into effect forbidding public towels the regular patrolmen of Chelsea have been supplied free with two towels. They have to wash the towels at home or pay for getting them washed. The superior officers and the reserve men not only have to wash their two towels, but have to buy them. The reserve men are shouting disciplinarian.

BALLOT AGAIN THIS AFTERNOON

The Uninstructed List.

Chief among the unknown quantities that were in part added by the early morning vote and which contribution is here first made plain was the uninstructed list. This list, originally containing 184 votes, has been reduced to 178 by the dropping out of the Philippines from the total, which operation in political mathematics changes the total vote of the convention to 1,088 and made the number essential to a majority 725-1-2 by the two-thirds majority rule of the convention.

Here is how the uninstructed vote lined up on the first ballot: Delaware, 6 for Wilson, Major, 1 for Clark, 1 for Wilson, 2 for Underwood; New York, 90 for Harmon; North Carolina, 16½ for Wilson, 6½ for Harmon, 7 for Underwood; Vermont, 8 for Baldwin; Hawaii, 2 for Clark, 4 for Wilson and 1 for Underwood. Total, 178 votes.

Analysis of the Vote.

The net result of the ballot shows that 363 votes, held cohesively, will prolong the convention indefinitely. It shows that Wilson, generally conceded to represent the Bryan last ditch strength, needs 39 votes to make sure of this deadlock. And it is recognized that Bryan can divert some of his test votes of strength since the convention began held 147 more votes than is necessary to tie up the voting until sorry time as he is satisfied with the candidate. Whether or not he can until hold this 147 votes is a matter that no judicious man would care to make the subject of a definite statement.

As a strong factor in this calculation it must be considered that a large element of the delegates desire victory and harmony without as much regard to personal issues. Tennessee strikingly illustrated this element on the first ballot when the cast six votes each for Clark, Wilson, Harmon and Underwood, dividing exactly between the radical and the conservative wings her party voice.

As for the New York vote, it can be taken as no criterion of the future action of the State. Undoubtedly it represents the sentiment of the controlling factors in the delegation. Possibly it did not represent the political judgment of the same leaders. They are free to throw the vote any way they please, and it is assured beyond the question of any man that it will be thrown in subsequent ballots in that direction which will surely tend to defeat Mr. Bryan, Mr. Wilson and all that is allied with that element.

An exact two-thirds of the total vote is the convention is 725 2-3.

On almost every ballot that has been taken fractional votes have appeared in the total. It is possible, therefore, that some candidate might receive 725½ votes and so constitute the necessary two-thirds.

Bryan's Resolution as First Presented, and as Adopted

[The first section was adopted after Mr. Bryan had withdrawn the second.]

Resolved—That in this crisis in our party's career, and in our country's history, this convention sends greetings to the people of the United States and reaffirms them that the party of Jefferson is still the champion of popular government and equality before the law. As proof of our fidelity to the people, we hereby declare ourselves opposed to the nomination of any candidate for President who is the representative of, or under any obligation to, J. Pierpont Morgan, Thomas F. Ryan, August Belmont, or any other member of the privilege-hunting and favor-seeking class.

Be It Further Resolved—That we demand the withdrawal from this convention of any delegate or delegates constituting or representing the above named interests.

PLATFORM COMMITTEE AT ODDS ON RECALL PLANK

BALTIMORE Md., June 28.—A proposed plank in the Democratic National platform providing for a constitutional amendment for the recall of federal judges was a stumbling block in the path of the eleven members of the subcommittee of the resolutions committee when it went into session at 10:30 o'clock.

The plan was to complete the platform and submit it to the whole resolutions committee for endorsement so it could go to the convention at once after the convention. The platform was practically completed. The judicial recall plank was, however, one matter for discussion before a report was made to the full committee.

William Jennings Bryan, who dictated most of the document, declared the plat form was progressive and probably would pass the convention unchanged. Most of the platform was formulated in the midst of a shower of telegraphic protests. Hundreds of employers throughout the country cried out against a platform containing planks at special privileges and urged a stronger declaration against the labor dictary. The protests were aimed especially at the labor injunction plank and against the abuses of injunctional powers of the courts, particularly in labor cases.

Direct Legislation.

The plank on direct legislation may be changed to include the recall of federal judges by appeal to Congress. This proposition was placed before the subcommittee, but today it was declared it might be squelched because it is too extreme progressiveness and the fact that the direct legislation planks have been included. Here is the judicial recall plank as it was offered:

"The method of removal of judges of the federal courts by process of impeachment has been demonstrated by more than a century of experience to be a failure. If there is no other way permissible in view of constitutional restrictions, by which the people may rid themselves of an unworthy and dishonest judge, the constitution should be amended so as to provide for the removal of such judges by address to both houses of Congress."

The plank on bank control is a strong one. It is framed substantially as follows:

Bank Control Plank.

"The people's commercial bank deposits constitute the liquid capital of the nation and should be so safeguarded as to ensure the use of at least the greater portion thereof in the ordinary channels of trade. The practice of many of the national banks, particularly in New York, the principal reserve center of the country, in investing the bulk of their deposits in stocks and bonds by loans upon such security or by direct purchase of bonds amounts to a conversion of so much of the liquid capital into permanent capital of the country and the funds required for the marketing of crops and the conduct of ordinary business. This is the cause of the annually recurring cry of a scarcity of funds with which to move the country's crops to market.

"We, therefore, favor an amendment to our national banking act prohibiting national banks from investing in stocks and bonds, directly or indirectly, in excess of their capital or their aggregate loans and investments respectively."

Tariff an Injustice.

The tariff plank, which favors tariff for revenue only and which was written by Mr. Bryan, may be summed up substantially as follows:

"Our protective tariff is a masterpiece of injustice and plus the protectees. Its schedules impose high duties on about three thousand imports, nearly one-half of them twenty-five per cent or more which is practically prohibitive of importation. Since the passage of the Dingley bill, in 1897, it has been chiefly obstructed foreign competition while hundreds of monopolies with inflated capital have sprung up before our eyes to avail themselves of the tariff and make our people pay interest upon their watered stock. They, in turn, have destroyed domestic competition, so that neither foreign nor domestic competition freely exists.

"These monopolies have laid their hand of greed so heavily upon our people that since 1897 the cost of building, rents, clothing, food and other necessaries of life have increased in an amount of over 50 per cent, an increase during the period of three times the amount of the rise in other highly protected countries in the world outside of Russia, which is the only country whose customs duties exceed our own.

"Protection justifies the burden of these high prices by the plea that it secures to the laborer a higher wage, while in truth our most highly protected factories are filled with recent immigrants from Southeastern Europe, who receive the lowest wage paid in the United States and who, like all of our laborers, sell their labor in a free trade market and buy the necessaries of life in a protected market.

Caused Years of Depression.

"It has brought about four years of continued depression in business. It has created among our people startling inequalities in life and fortune. It furnishes a most powerful motive to the protected for the corrupt control of government, which promotes frauds, fosters smuggling, and confines commerce largely to our home market. Its tempting favors have drawn the farmers' boys to the cities and taught us all to look for easy and unearned profit through legislation. It has been a bane to foreign commerce, a nurserie to scientific management and the bar to industrial progress.

"To meet these ugly facts, and to delay relief to the people, protection offers us a tariff board to determine the difference in the cost of manufacturing here and abroad which involves the impossible task of examining hundreds of our industries carried on here under many different conditions and comparing those industries with the same industries in other countries scattered all over the world and carried on under like varying conditions. We denounce protection and we propose specifically in favor of a tariff for revenue only."

ROOSEVELT HIT BY LA FOLLETTE

WASHINGTON, June 28.—Senator La Follette writes to La Follette's Weekly:

Until Roosevelt came into the open there was a strong and rapidly growing progressive movement within the Republican party. But this movement, when it gave promise of national success, Roosevelt projected his ambition to be President a third time. He spent weeks carefully planning a "spontaneous call." He responded by announcing that he would be a "receptive" candidate. His candidacy began to drag. He and his friends were in despair. Then came his defeat in North Dakota. He became desperate. An enormous campaign fund was raised. Headquarters were opened in New York, Washington, Chicago, and States East and West. Newspaper writers were engaged at large prices to boom his candidacy. Special trains were hired and the "receptive" candidate started in frantic pursuit of the nomination. There has never been in a primary campaign an approach to the extravagant expenditures made.

Trust Men His Supporters.

Men notoriously identified with the Steel Trust and the Harvester Trust became his most active supporters. Leading reactionaries, stand-patters, and political bosses of the Hanna and Quay sort became his closest political friends.

A number of the newer recruits to the Republican party who have become the noisiest supporters of Roosevelt, the "whoop" is scattered out to them that Roosevelt had cooperated with Aldrich during seven years he was President. They forgot that it was only when Roosevelt was in Africa, through efforts of men who for years had been fighting special interests, that the progressive cause became a national movement. That Roosevelt was for Taft in 1910 when Taft was denouncing all progressives as "pirates and traitors," that he waited until little more than a year ago, balancing chances before deciding whether to cast in his lot with the progressives, counted for nothing.

"Caught the Crowd."

They carried overwhelmingly the great standpat States of Illinois and Pennsylvania. No real progressive could have secured anything like such a vote in either of those two States. It had, however, the outward seeming of success, the sort that catches the crowd. Fortunately, it did not enable him to secure the nomination, which would have compromised the progressive movement and defeated its achievement for years.

Upon Roosevelt and his followers rests the responsibility of having divided the progressives in their first national contest. In the two months they put forward no issues. They made no fight against the reactionary platform. They substituted vulgar personalities and the coarse epithets of the prize ring for the serious consideration of economic problems.

ENGLISH FOX HOUNDS FOR A. H. HIGGINSON

Captain J. E. Evans of the Warren liner Michigan, which arrived in this port today, thirteen days out from Liverpool, says he met wintry and stormy weather throughout the trip. The forward deck was awash throughout the greater part of the trip, and for six hours on the stormy first, the engines were stopped to repair a break. The Michigan passed a small iceberg. The liner brought four fine English fox hounds consigned to Higginson of the Middlesex Hunt, who already has a large kennel.

Nomination of Progressive Is Assured, Says Bryan

BALTIMORE, June 28.—William J. Bryan said today that he had played a game of checkers in the Democratic convention last night and won. He likened the introduction of the resolution against a reactionary candidate to the coup of a checker player who has moved his man between two pieces belonging to the enemy with the blank spaces on the board about him cleared so that the capture of one or the other is inevitable.

"Don't you see," he continued, "that I was bound to take one of them. I could afford to be indifferent as to what they did.

"The resolution put the convention on record as against these influences as soon as it was offered. There was no way out of that. Moreover, the convention itself is a small affair compared with the party it represents.

"I am fighting for the party, and with this resolution adopted the way is open to a great Democratic victory."

A progressive will be nominated, the Nebraskan asserted, declaring the result was inevitable by the resolution, and it would have been the same whether the proposition had been voted down instead of having carried.

"Assures a Progressive."

"I was indifferent as to what the delegates did," he said. "If the resolution was voted down, it compelled a progressive to be nominated in order that the convention might save itself. If the delegates did not dare to nominate a man who would be in contrast so out of harmony with the resolution. Some of my friends feared that it might fall of a two-thirds vote, therefore, to safeguard me I suspend the rules, but if I had secured a mere majority in the roll call the effect would have been the same as if the resolution had passed. I am satisfied."

The Nebraskan talked as he glanced over a pile of 500 or more telegrams that had come in from all parts of the country commending the resolution. Evidently they did not displease the Commoner.

The Nebraskan, exhilarated as he was over his victory, would not discuss the probable result of the balloting. He said he would not discuss candidates. He felt a trifle more free to talk, however, when the names of Thomas Fortune Ryan and August Belmont, whom he had mentioned in the complete resolution he had presented, demanding that they be removed as delegates to the convention, were brought up.

He Is Not Worrying.

"I am not worrying," he said, "about Mr. Ryan or about Mr. Belmont. However, I do not believe that they will be delegates to the next Democratic convention in the near future."

The Nebraskan took issue with the Democratic opponents that it would be infringing on the rights of the States to have expelled the two men.

"Some of our Democrats are sincere in the belief that it would be an invasion of rights of the State to expel any of its personalities and the coarse epithets of the prize ring for the serious consideration of economic problems.

"I introduced this resolution to force the nomination of a progressive. That was my object in coming to this convention. I feel that my coming has not been in vain.

"In view of the fact, Mr. Bryan, that the contest between the progressive candidates has apparently narrowed itself until there are two who are leading, would you be willing to express your belief as to the possible winner?" the Nebraskan was asked.

"I shall not discuss candidates," was the emphatic reply, "further than to say that my position today is as it has been from the very beginning. My position regarding the two leading candidates is neutral. I am instructed for Clark."

"Any Progressive Suits Me."

"Does that mean," he was asked, "that you lean towards Clark in your preference?"

"I announced before the primaries that my support of the men for whom the delegates were instructed would not indicate my preference."

The interviewer put another question:

"How would you feel towards Senator John W. Kern of Indiana if neither Clark nor Wilson could be nominated?"

"Any progressive suits me," said Bryan. "My position from the first has been opposed to a reactionary. That is my whole fight."

Mr. Bryan was told that Colonel James M. Guffey of Pennsylvania had said that the resolution introduced last night had shattered any feeling hope that the Commoner might help get the party's nomination, Mr. Bryan smiled and replied:

"Well, Colonel Guffey is an authority on shattered hopes and therefore I feel appreciative after hearing what he has to say."

"Mr. Bryan, a rumor is rife throughout the convention and in the various hotel quarters that you are seeking an opportunity to bolt the party, and that last night's resolution was to pave the way for such a move. Has this any foundation?"

Good humor vanished. The telegrams were forgotten. Mr. Bryan rose from his chair, strode to the window, glanced outside for a moment, then wheeled about.

"That question is always the last is put to me by newspapermen because they know it will end the interview. I regard the question as impertinent and one that is not deserving of an answer."

NO SEPARATION, SAYS MRS. HEINZE

NEW YORK, June 28.—Mrs. Frits Augustus Heinze denied today that she and her husband had separated.

"Mr. Heinze and I," she said, "understand each other thoroughly and are completely happy together. The report of a separation between us is a gross injustice to me personally, and to my two children. It is a tissue of falsehoods.

"My husband and I are living together. This is his home. It is true that his business takes him out of town often, but here he lives when he is in New York.

PASTOR FORCED OUT BY VILLAGE GOSSIPS

A. H. Carpenter will cease to be pastor of the Cromwell Baptist Church, next Sunday, it was announced, but the followers against vote to ask him to remain.

Mr. Boardman says the clergyman was a good friend of his, despite the gossip.

conduct ever since that reward system was instituted by the Elevated, that he never had a black mark and that he drew $2.60 a day for ten hours' work.

As on the first day, the Elevated was not represented in opposition to the strikers at the hearing. But relays of Elevated stenographers were taking the strikers' testimony.

Alexander Smyth of Reading, conductor on the Bay State trolley line, swore that he acted as temporary secretary for the union up to the time of the strike, also as secretary for Fred Fay, the organizer who came here. He submitted records of four meetings from May 27 up to June 7, the day the strike was called.

Smyth swore that 600 men were obligated to the union May 27, 200 more May 29, 300 more May 31, 615 on June 3 and "several hundred" on June 7. Smyth could not tell, although looking at the list from time to time, how many of the strike, also as members in the city on strike and several hundred others on strike who are not in the union. He said that this week he had paid out weekly benefits of $5 to 3,170 men, making $15,850, and that he had not completed his list of names yet. He added that many men are not drawing strike benefits because they have more or less work in other lines now.

EVERY TIRED LOOKING WOMAN

Wants to Know How to Avoid Appearing Old Before Her Time.

Some women always wear a worn, tired look. It is the outward sign of nervousness with its accompaniment of worry, headache and sleeplessness.

It is useless to tell some women to rest. Circumstances will not permit. But it is always possible to build up the strength to meet the strain.

Overwork seldom kills. Worry often does. If you would keep the worry from your face strengthen your system with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and do not worry. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are a blessing to women. They preserve the beauty that health alone can give, the youthful brightness of eye, the color in cheeks and lips that comes alone from rich, red blood.

Mrs. Philip H. Smack, of No. 125 Smith street, South Portland, Me., says: "While attending school I caught cold and suffered from weakness for about a year. I was all run down and did not have a particle of color. My parents thought I was going into consumption. I was short of breath and was subject to fainting spells. My limbs seemed to be all tired out and I had hardly enough strength to get around. My stomach was so weak that whatever I ate caused me a great deal of pain. My kidneys were affected and I kept growing weaker. I finally had to quit school. I did not improve much under the doctor's treatment of about six months and later gave Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a trial. Soon I could see that I was gaining in flesh and strength. There was plenty of color in my cheeks. My appetite improved and I was cured. I certainly think Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are a wonderful remedy and cheerfully recommend them."

Get a box of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills from your druggist today. Do not delay. Begin the treatment now. Write the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y., and learn what the pills have accomplished in cases like your own. If you cannot get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills readily near home send fifty cents for one box or $2.50 for six boxes, by mail, postpaid.

Two helpful booklets, "Building Up the Blood" and "Plain Talks to Women," giving more information about the remedy will be sent free to any address on request.

TALKING DOG WILL COME TO AMERICA

LONDON, June 28.—Oscar Hammerstein has added Don, the German talking dog, to "Don Quichote" and "The Children of Don" as one of his novelties. Lloyds declined to insure the dog, but Mr. Hammerstein signed a contract to pay $30,000 to Stock Haberland of Berlin, the owner, in case of death of the dog during its appearance in New York or on the trip.

Nomination of Progressive Is Assured, Says Bryan

BALTIMORE, June 28.—William J. Bryan said today that he had played a game of checkers in the Democratic convention last night and won. He likened the introduction of the resolution against a reactionary candidate to the coup of a checker player who has moved his man between two pieces belonging to the enemy with the blank spaces on the board about him cleared so that the capture of one or the other is inevitable.

"Don't you see," he continued, "that I was bound to take one of them. I could afford to be indifferent as to what they did.

"The resolution put the convention on record as against these influences as soon as it was offered. There was no way out of that. Moreover, the convention itself is a small affair compared with the party it represents.

"I am fighting for the party, and with this resolution adopted the way is open to a great Democratic victory."

A progressive will be nominated, the Nebraskan asserted, declaring the result was inevitable by the resolution, and it would have been the same whether the proposition had been voted down instead of having carried.

"Assures a Progressive."

"I was indifferent as to what the delegates did," he said. "If the resolution was voted down, it compelled a progressive to be nominated in order that the convention might save itself. If the delegates did not dare to nominate a man who would be in contrast so out of harmony with the resolution. Some of my friends feared that it might fall of a two-thirds vote, therefore, to safeguard me I suspend the rules, but if I had secured a mere majority in the roll call the effect would have been the same as if the resolution had passed. I am satisfied."

The Nebraskan talked as he glanced over a pile of 500 or more telegrams that had come in from all parts of the country commending the resolution. Evidently they did not displease the Commoner.

The Nebraskan, exhilarated as he was over his victory, would not discuss the probable result of the balloting. He said he would not discuss candidates. He felt a trifle more free to talk, however, when the names of Thomas Fortune Ryan and August Belmont, whom he had mentioned in the complete resolution he had presented, demanding that they be removed as delegates to the convention, were brought up.

He Is Not Worrying.

"I am not worrying," he said, "about Mr. Ryan or about Mr. Belmont. However, I do not believe that they will be delegates to the next Democratic convention in the near future."

The Nebraskan took issue with the Democratic opponents that it would be infringing on the rights of the States to have expelled the two men.

"Some of our Democrats are sincere in the belief that it would be an invasion of rights of the State to expel any of its personalities and the coarse epithets of the prize ring for the serious consideration of economic problems.

"I introduced this resolution to force the nomination of a progressive. That was my object in coming to this convention. I feel that my coming has not been in vain.

"In view of the fact, Mr. Bryan, that the contest between the progressive candidates has apparently narrowed itself until there are two who are leading, would you be willing to express your belief as to the possible winner?" the Nebraskan was asked.

"I shall not discuss candidates," was the

DEALERS GIVE AWAY MEATS

Meat dealers in the North End today gave away fish and meat to women suffering privation as a result of the kosher meat strike, according to Harry Leven, a dealer, of No. 73 Salem street.

Leven also stated that the North End dealers will hold a meeting today to consult on the question of closing their shops. He predicted that the shops will be closed on Monday.

Leven said:

"In our shop alone, today and yesterday, we have given away from fifty to sixty pounds of fish and as much more of meat. Other butchers are doing the same thing. Many Polish and other women come here who are suffering.

"We shall probably close up on Monday. We are losing money by keeping open—what with the high prices the butchers charge, and with the way our custom is falling off. We have been keeping open only to hold our trade. If our trade doesn't want us we shall close."

Mrs. Rose Wulin, leader of the strike in the absence of Mrs. Hoffman, also predicted that the North End shops would close Monday.

New York Woman Leader.

L. Rosenstein of No. 101 Lowell street, West End, was reported today to be selling chickens. A policeman was on guard at his store, but no trouble developed during the early hours.

Mrs. Ray Levine today took charge of the cases of the women arrested at No. 32 Spring street. She is a New York woman. She was appointed by the New York Equal Suffrage League to work among the women of the East Side, and learned the Yiddish language. When the strike started here, she came to Boston. She has extended the strike into the South End, two shops having closed on Harrison avenue, and she wil be active in the defence of the women arrested. She is not a Jewess.

The police guard about stores in the West End was increased today, because of the fact that up to sunset tonight, the kosher meat stores are unusually busy. The Jewish Sabbath begins at sunset.

By Monday, it was announced by the meat strike committee today, the kosher meat shops in Cambridge and Lynn are expected to be closed. Arrangements were completed by the committee for a parade of 25,000 women Sunday afternoon, preceding a mass meeting at 6 o'clock Sunday in Swarts Hall, No. 15 Leverett street.

Parade by Women.

The parade is to march through the West, North and South Ends, and is planned as a great protest by the women taking part against kosher meat prices. At the mass meeting, action wil be taken for a more systematic campaign to carry on the meat strike. It was announced today that circulars may be printed in many languages, calling on women of all nationalities to join in the strike. The committee learned today that the strike already has grown to such proportions that the butchers had felt the effect keenly and that the prices of meat had dropped considerably.

In twenty-four hours kosher forequarters, which had been selling at 14½ cents a pound, had dropped to 12½ cents per pound.

In letters to the rabbis, begging them to interfere, a number of retail meat dealers declared that they were blameless and that the Beef Trust should bear the brunt of the attack. On the other hand, the strike committee has urged that a committee be appointed to urge the Legislature to probe the high cost of meat. The retailers were censured for raising the prices.

The meat strike may be brought to the attention of the Board of Health on the ground that chickens are being sold under unsanitary conditions.

A committee of three women, Mrs. Rose Wulin, Miss Rosie Dronova and Mrs. Ray Levine, today went to a dwelling on Revere street where they said chickens were being sold. A patrolman was guarding the door. The women were told that anyone interfering with persons buying chickens there would be locked up and that, if chickens were taken away from customers, the persons doing so would be charged with larceny.

They departed, declaring that they would make complaint to the Board of Health of chickens being sold at this place.

NEW YORK, June 28.—According to Garrett P. Serviss, the astronomer and writer, who sailed for France, it will not be many years before aviators will fly to the moon. "I begin to think seriously, but not too seriously, now that we have achieved the navigation of the air by mechanical means, that there may remain the necessity of providing air to breathe and things to eat for man to go to the moon," said Mr. Serviss. "But we need a new motive force. Electrical propulsion hints what that force will be."

HINT LOVE TRAGEDY IN HEADLESS MYSTERY

The suspected slayer of two persons is in his twenties, and the girl is thought to be a native of southern France who had lived here long enough to rank almost as an American.

The police, in the light of recent developments, don't attach much weight to the vivid testimony of Joseph Capelle, who claims to have been an eye-witness to a strange and uncanny midnight ritual some weeks ago on the railroad tracks on the opposite side of the river from that where the woman's body was found. Nor do they now think that the bundle of woman's clothing and effects, found under some bushes in Hamlet cemetery, three-quarters of a mile from the spot where the body was found, have any connection with the woman victim.

If the clothing did belong to the beheaded woman it would show her to be of extremely humble station—a low-paid mill operative, but the remains of the victim contradict such an occupation. The anatomy of the body showed her to have hands of refinement and her person showed extreme care.

Her fingers were inclined to be long and tapering, despite the swelling due to weeks in the dye-stained water. The nails were carefully manicured and pointed. There were no traces of callouses due to the handling of shuttles or other mill appliances. She had never done hard work.

She was light-complexioned, about thirty to thirty-five years of age, weighed 150 and, allowing the average nine inches for the head, was five feet four to six inches in height. There was not a blemish or birthmark to help identification, nor were there any rings on her fingers. Her skin was exceedingly fair and her body was that of a well-nourished person.

The feet look as if a size four shoe might fit them. The hands are too long and slender to fit the coarse black worsted gloves found among the effects in the cemetery. Furthermore, the corset, old, frayed and patched, was found by later measurements to be too small for the body. The character of the clothing found by Louis Thibault of No. 907 Benson street, is best illustrated by the fact that when his child sold the greater part of it, the junk dealer paid only seven cents and spurned what the police have as exhibits.

Purse is Best Clue

In the bundle found under the bushes in a thickly settled section of the city, on a street—a place poorly suited for concealing anything a great while—was a white skirt waist of poor texture; a black underskirt; one shoe; black worsted gloves; a ticket; the purse and a piece of rope of the foreign woman use here for shopping; a regulation imitation black seal handbag, badly worn, with a brass engraved high top, a bag devoid of contents or identifying marks; the corsets, and a small fancy leather purse drawn together at the top by a string.

If the clothing and effects have any connection with the victim, this change purse would be sufficiently uncommon to serve as the best means of identification. It is a natural leather tint, pliable as chamois, with a front made of woven straps. It held nothing.

The police are inclined to the theory that these effects are foreign to the case. They were picked up on the other side of the river and nearly three-quarters of a mile away.

To reach the secluded point where the body was found, the slayer and his accomplice—and he must have had one in disposing of the body, if not in the actual killing—would have had to take a very circuitous and hazardous route, passing along Manville road, through Hamlet avenue and thence across the bridge, and back on the other side of the river along Cumberland Hill road and down the wagon track to the shore of the grove.

It is not likely that they covered such a course burdened by the body. Nobody who had displayed such cunning and care in removing all marks of identification, including the tell-tale head, would have been likely to be so foolhardy as to toss the clothing where it was so susceptible to discovery.

Everything indicates that the clothing and the head met the same disposition. They were either burned, buried or sunk in the middle of the river where it would have been easy to throw them with weights. The most exhaustive search of the shores on both sides of the river and grappling of its bed have failed to reveal any trace of the head which would, the police figure, lead to prompt identification.

Tells of Discovery.

Eugene Jacobs, who found the body, lives on a hill and the declivity to the river is sharp and wooded. The house overlooks a dozen acres now overrun by pigs of all sizes and shades. In picnic days the place was famous for river clambakes. Later it became a roadhouse and two years ago, after Chief of Police Boston closed it, Jacobs and his wife rented the place.

Jacobs says he has been pestered by woodchucks and muskrats. Last Tuesday he shouldered his gun to get a shot at a particularly troublesome woodchuck, and, in following the trail to the river's edge, peered through the overhanging shrubbery. He caught sight of a white object. He thought it a dog at first, but closer glance showed it to be the body of a woman floating with her hands tied behind her back.

He telephoned for the police and Chief Boston and Sergeant Detective Sutton, who has charge of the case, responded. Medical Examiner Reed, assisted by Dr. Edward L. Myers, performed the autopsy in the grove under a hot sun and the body was taken to the vault, where it awaits identification.

Nature, as often before, revealed the crime. The body was weighted by two very heavy stones. One was fastened to a clothes line found around the knees and the other to a rope tied under the arms. The stone anchoring the upper body, the heavier of the two, so heavy that it has been found impossible to lift it out of the mud, got free from the rope, which was gradually worn out by the current, allowing the body to come to the surface.

May Have Been Drugged.

When the body was drawn up the stone came with it. It is triangular and weighs more than fifty pounds. The clothes line was clumsily tied in a succession of common knots, which showed the slayer to be a novice with a rope. But its coils were drawn so tightly that they almost cut the flesh, leaving deep ridges. A strand of cord fastened the arms behind the back.

The killing was unusually atrocious. The absence of wounds or abrasions from blows on the trunk indicated that the victim may first have been drugged, or her throat may have been cut while she slept.

The missing head may have been battered, but the police feel that the fatal blow severed the throat and that decapitation followed. The doctors are not sure what instrument was used. It was evidently a knife with a heavy, keen blade.

The head was severed down almost to the chest line and it was a rough job. The work was plainly that of a novice who may have been skilled in the use of a knife as a weapon of attack, but who was palpably ignorant of surgery and of human anatomy.

All connected with the investigation agree that one man could never have thrown the body into the river alone with two such cumbersome weights attached. It would require both hands for any man to lift either stone and how even two accomplished it with the weight of the body added, especially when they succeeded in tossing it fully six feet from the ragged shore line, is hard to comprehend.

The body was found under two stout saplings whose trunks stretch out in a sort of a natural balcony. Evidently the slayer and his accomplice, if he had one, rolled the body and weights on these trees part way or rested it there. The water where it was found is less than four feet deep.

A more desolate spot, day or night, could not be imagined. Whoever did it was thoroughly conversant with the grove, and knew the most favorable stretch of shore. Furthermore, the stones had to be obtained and fastened in the dark. Had a lantern been used the light might have been easily sighted from the windows of Jacob's house on the brow of the hill, 100 yards up the embankment.

The theory that the body was brought in an automobile has been dispelled effectively by the police. Jacobs said he found fresh tracks in the private driveway down as far as the cross-path, and that he had never seen an auto track extend as far in during his tenancy of two years, but the police accounted for that automobile. Undoubtedly the body was brought in a carriage like at night by a person or persons familiar with every foot of the ground.

Reports that the ground near the river bank showed evidence of a struggle are ridiculous, in view of the fact that eight weeks of weather would be apt to efface footprints, and furthermore, the droves of pigs have rooted up about every yard of the grove. Jacobs denies that he found any trace of a struggle.

There doesn't appear to be any doubt of the fact that the killing and decapitation occurred away from the grove, but it is to some house not a great distance away, and certainly not outside of the city if the latest scraps of evidence permit to anything.

Several witnesses have come forward and supplied threads which are reported to be taking the shape of a rapidly growing chain which promises to entangle at least one man and perhaps more.

Governor Pothier's interest in the tragedy has stirred favorable comment. The State offer of $1,000 as a reward has caused a number of citizens and amateur sleuths to take the trail.

HENEY DENIES HE WAS A ROOSEVELT EMISSARY TO BRYAN

WASHINGTON, June 28.—Francis J. Heney of San Francisco makes a positive denial of the story that he called on William J. Bryan in Baltimore as an emissary of Colonel Roosevelt, bearing the proposition that if Governor Wilson should be nominated by the Democrats Colonel Roosevelt would withdraw as the third party candidate and throw the progressive Republican strength to Wilson. Heney, who is in Washington on business, said:

"There is absolutely no truth in the statement that I acted as Colonel Roosevelt's emissary to Colonel Bryan at Baltimore. There is no truth in the statement that Colonel Roosevelt sent word by me that he would not be a candidate in case the Democrats should nominate Governor Wilson. There is no truth in the statement that Colonel Roosevelt would offer, or attempt to deliver, the progressive Republican strength to Governor Wilson or any other Democratic candidate. Colonel Roosevelt will himself be a candidate—the candidate of the progressive Republican party, the third party. That is absolutely certain."

$30,000 DAMAGE IN WALTHAM FIRE

Eight hundred canoes were destroyed early today in a fire that caused damage estimated at more than $30,000 to the canoe factory and storehouse of James G. Burgin on Weord avenue in the Crescent Park District of Waltham, which brought out all the apparatus in the city, together with engines from Newton.

The building, two stories high and 200 feet long on the river front, was occupied on the lower floor by the Weord avenue Canoe Club and as a canoe livery. On the second floor were the Waltham Boat and Canoe Factory and the clubhouse of the Waltham Boatsters.

The cause is unknown, but the fire apparently started in the rear of the first floor. Chief George L. Johnson turned in a general alarm. Later, he also asked help of Newton.

While directing his men Chief Johnson was injured by a nail which ran into his foot. He remained on duty.

The building, containing about eight hundred canoes, was burned flat, and the flames spread to another two-story wooden building, about one hundred and fifty feet long, owned by Harvey P. Bartlett and occupied by the New York Bottling Company and the Riverside Wet Wash Laundry. This building was reduced to a shell.

A number of canoes were saved from Burgin's building, but the flames were so fierce that they forced several of the would-be rescuers to jump into the river.

CONVINCED THAT NEW TONIC IS SPLENDID

Mrs. Hardy Has Suffered with Modern Ailment

The following statement was obtained for publication at a Boston drug store from Mrs. Anna Hardy, 351 Eighth street, Boston:

"I have been in poor health for some time past. My condition grew gradually worse and during the past few months it has been hard for me to get relief. I didn't eat or sleep well and had no energy at all. My stomach was in bad shape and I suffered with intense nervousness. I would become startled at the slightest noise and my heart would beat rapidly at the least exertion. I was induced to try the new tonic, Tona Vita. It is the best remedy on earth. It helped me right away and has made a new woman of me."

Hundreds of men and women in Boston are suffering with the same run-down, depressed condition as described by Mrs. Hardy. The trouble is produced by over-wrought nerves and over-worked brain and stomach. Nervousness, sleeplessness, imperfect digestion, poor circulation, listlessness, loss of energy and ambition, and depression of spirits are characteristic symptoms of this trouble.

The hustle and worry and unnatural life of city dwellers is too much of a strain on the constitution of most people, and nervous debility is the result. This malady is not thoroughly understood by the American people as yet, but it is a very common complaint and is usually referred to as "all run down."

When a man or woman does not know exactly what is the matter, but says, "I am all run down," this usually means that they are afflicted with nervous debility. Tona Vita is a certain relief for this trouble and is a tonic for the mind as well as the body. Any person afflicted with nervous debility is sure to be nervous, moody and depressed. It is remarkable to see how quickly the spirits and disposition improve after a few days' treatment. Tona Vita can be purchased at all leading drug stores in Boston.

TONIC AND BEVERAGE VALUE OF HIRES

Qualities of this Greatest American Drink that Have Made it so Popular.

The reason you crave Hires in summer is that it contains tonic properties that build up your system. As a beverage Hires has been recognized as the first real American drink, but its toning properties are as pronounced as its thirst-quenching properties.

Here are the ingredients that make it valuable:

Sarsaparilla, sassafras, pipsissewa and hops—clear the blood and aid digestion.

Vanilla and wintergreen—recognized nerve tonic value.

Triticum and juniper berries—for kidneys and bladder.

Ginger and birch bark—a gentle astringent

Roots and barks, herbs and flowers—for their stimulating and refreshing aroma.

It is because of these natural tonic properties that Hires has so long been recognized as the most healthful as well as the most refreshing of drinks.

There isn't a trace of drugs in Hires. It is a natural refresher. When you want a real drink—not ordinary rootbeer—just say Hires

YOUR nearest soda fountain has Hires, of course. Step around there now while you're in the mood and Just say HIRES.

Hires is the genuine rootbeer. Flavors of forest and field—essence of roots and herbs. The good things that please the taste and brace the whole system. But not a trace of drugs.

EYES OF CONVENTION ON BAY STATE DELEGATION

FIRM FOR CLARK ON FIRST BALLOT, BUT FOSS' HAT IS IN RING.

By JAMES E. DONOGHUE.

BALTIMORE, June 28.—It was early dawn, past 4 o'clock, before the Democratic delegates in the Armory, and the most of them nodding, heard the last of the nominating speeches.

Twenty thousand spectators crowded the spacious convention hall and as many more were turned away.

When it came to the ballot, Massachusetts cast her entire thirty-six votes for Clark.

"I will vote for Clark on the first ballot," said Dr. Sullivan, early today in the convention hall, "and I will do it because he won the preferential vote. But I am not going to stay with him. My choice is Wilson, and I think he will be nominated."

Nine Massachusetts delegates, it became known at the convention hall today, will vote after the second ballot for Governor Wilson. This news created a surprise in the camp of Champ Clark. The tearing down of the Wilson banner, and it's rescue by girl students, discloses in another phase how bitter is the strife raging about this momentous election.

Nobody for nights here has laid a wager. Time was when hotel safes held thousands and represented hundreds of circuit bettors. All that is over. The betting is light and in secret.

Foss on the Spot.

Henry T. Skeffington brought the Douglas boom for Vice-President into town. Skeffington is the same Harry who years ago thrilled political gatherings, who formed the "flying wedge" and made Douglas Governor. Douglas literature for Vice-President is on the streets and Skeffington is boss of the job.

The Foss boom for President is in many hands, but the Governor himself is taking active charge of affairs. He is in the field, too, with a campaign already prepared. His hat is in the ring the same as Roosevelt's.

Governor Foss, in a natty light gray business suit and tan shoes, came from Burlington, Vt., with a college degree tucked away in his inside pocket. Vermont is the native State of the progressive Governor, who twice in succession has carried a rock-ribbed Republican commonwealth for the Democrats.

Governor Foss was accompanied from the Green Mountains by his brother, Congressman George Edmund Foss of Illinois. Brother George is not as progressive as the Governor, nor such a believer as his brother is in extending the powers of the people to be exercised by representatives direct.

Congressman Foss on reaching Baltimore, had little to do except shake hands with the prominent ones, the "Who's Who" in the political game of today, and to greet fellow Republican Congressmen whom he chanced to meet.

"Just tell the boys I'm here," was all that Governor Foss would say as newspaper men besieged him. "Are you a candidate," was asked him. "I'm just here with Mrs. Foss," the Governor replied, "for a little rest. Just say I'm simply here."

"And for what, Governor?"

"Just here simply to go to a club and then retire," said Governor Foss.

"Aren't you going to the headquarters of the hoped-to-be President?" was asked.

"Well, yes, but not soon. I'll get there sometime this evening," replied the Governor.

"Fitz" in Moving Pictures.

Seats at the convention hall today were plentiful at $1 per copy. There were many thousands more tickets printed and distributed than there are seats in the convention hall. As a result there were 5,000 or more with tickets who could not get into the hall.

Mayor Fitzgerald and the Boston delegates got in the moving pictures taken outside the hall before the sixth session. The photographer took the Massachusetts paraders as they arrived at the hall, and later got the Mayor and others of the big eight to pose for a special set.

Delegate Sullivan of Salem has a touring car and is in big demand around the Massachusetts headquarters. He came down from Boston over the road with Mrs. Sullivan, and he proposes to go home by that method.

Edmund S. Higgins, the secretary of the Massachusetts delegation, is carrying around a gold watch presented him by the delegation in recognition of his work for the comfort and convenience of the delegates. The delegates also presented Dean Foster of the Baltimore Dental College with a silver loving cup in recognition of his furnishing a meeting hall gratis.

Hotel Service Slow.

The Baltimore bands are not quite up on "Sweet Adeline," but they made a brave attempt to play it for the parade up to the convention hall. Humphrey O'Sullivan of Lowell, who provided the band, was given the honor of beating the bass drum.

Service at the hotel is particularly slow.

The SAFE Summer drink, as well as the most delightful

WHITE ROCK WATER

NEVER overheats the stomach

THE GOVERNOR, HOPEFUL, TAKES PERSONAL CHARGE OF HIS BOOM.

To get through a meal without waiting an hour one must order his food in advance. The prices are just 100 per cent above the regular prices despite the poor service.

Jeremiah J. McNamara is one who thinks that the Foss banners outside the Massachusetts delegation headquarters makes the crowd look ridiculous. "We are a Champ Clark delegation and yet we are flaunting Foss banners," says Jerry. "I think we should have Clark banners since Foss says he is not a candidate, while there is a chance for Clark to win."

"Jerry" Watson, with immaculate white ducks and a regular Champ Clark uniform, started the boom for Congress for John F. Kennedy of Ward 21 to succeed Congressman Peters. Representative William N. McMorrow of Ward 23 is also a candidate to succeed Peters. Both McMorrow and Kennedy are the district delegates from the district.

W. T. A. Fitzgerald for Mayor.

Incidentally Register of Deeds William T. A. Fitzgerald wants to be the next Mayor of Boston and does not deny that he is a candidate. The talk of another Fitzgerald for Mayor was started on the journey, and all week "it has" been going the rounds with nobody making an attempt to check it.

Mayor J. Edward Barry of Cambridge is the most popular delegate in the Massachusetts party. He could have been a compromise candidate for the National Committee and was without opposition, but he refused to consider it.

David I. Walsh of Fitchburg gets one of the best jobs given to the Massachusetts delegation. He serves on the committee which will draw up the platform, having been appointed with Senator Pomerene, Ohio Democrat from Nebraska is chairman of the committee.

MILITANTS MAY JOIN NEW PARTY

The Militant Progressive Republican State Committee has been called to meet tomorrow and decide upon the stand the organization shall take towards the third party.

A lively discussion is expected. Senator Arthur L. Nason of Hartford has stated that he will remain regular, while Secretary Russell A. Wood of Cambridge will follow the Colonel. A second bolt is said within a bolt, is possible.

President Matthew Hale of the Progressive Republicans of Massachusetts, personal representative of the Colonel, said that he expected the Militants would cooperate with the new party. Mr. Wood and William H. Wilcutt, one of the early immigrants of the Republican State Committee, called at the Progressive headquarters and the decision to accumulate the Militants received.

It is Mr. Wood's idea that it would be good tactics to engage a fight in the Republican primaries with the hope of capturing the State organization.

"If we should win at the Republican primaries," he said, "we would have all the advantage of the party machinery, and we could put Charlie Hatfield and the other machine men to rout. A general conducting a campaign would try to seize the enemy's equipment, and use it against him. That is what we ought to do."

Mr. Hale said that no determination has been reached as to how far the new party would go in inducing the members of either of the old parties. It would probably not be done, he said, in the case of State officers, and there is no certainty that it will be done with representatives.

There will be a dinner tomorrow afternoon in honor of the "Honored 18," as an expression of appreciation for the stand they took at Chicago.

Here's the Prettiest Girl in Newport

Miss Moreland Wears No Gown Twice

Has New Hat for Each Day and Sets a Record for Lavish Wardrobe.

NEWPORT, R. I., June 28.—Fickle Newport has chosen another "Prettiest Girl," bestowing the title, for the day, at least, upon Miss Esther Moreland, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Moreland of Pittsburgh, who are opening their first season here in the Thomas villa, formerly occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Robert Goelet.

But Miss Moreland has a more interesting and a really unique distinction. She never wears the same dress twice.

Although her costumes are the most fetching that have been seen so far this season at the resort where fashion reigns, none of them appears the second time.

Although they bear the unmistakable marks of the handicraft of famous and high-priced dressmakers, a gown that may have been a month in the making is lucky if it is worn half a day by the new Princess of Newport. Once taken of, it is discarded forever, if reports of Miss Moreland's passion for new clothes are true.

Certain it is that she has never been seen twice in the same costume during the week which she has spent here.

It is the same with her hats. It is said that she never permits even the most valuable plumes to be used a second time. A new hat every time she steps out of doors seems to be the rule.

And this new crowned queen of beauty and millinery is only a few weeks past her twentieth birthday. She is tall, with Grecian features, large black eyes, perfect mouth and glorious complexion.

She is by no means completely absorbed in the acquirement of clothes. An athlete of prowess in many sports, she will be the delight of the cottage colony's athletic set this summer. She swims, rides, plays tennis admirably, paddles a canoe and golfs.

A well-trained soprano voice tops off the many accomplishments of the young woman who is expected to be one of the belles of the season.

STARTS A TWO-VEIL FAD AT NEWPORT

NEWPORT, June 28.—Wearing a cream colored silk veil flowing five feet behind her Panama hat, and a lavender colored veil under it, Miss Marguerite Perry, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. Hayward Perry of New York, introduced a new fad in Newport, which is amusing. The veil floating in the wind attracted much attention along Bellevue avenue.

One of Plymouth's Quadruplets Dies

PLYMOUTH, June 28.—One of the quadruplets born to Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Furtardo is dead, but the doctors believe the others, all girls, will live. The stork has brought five children to the Furtardo home in ten months. Mrs. Furtardo is but twenty years old and weighs only ninety pounds.

The boy, who is dead, weighed five pounds and was the heaviest of the quadruplets. The girls weigh four and a half, three and a half and two and a half pounds. They were named as soon as they were born, the boy being called Manuel and the girls Angelina, Theresa and Dergerlina. They were christened by the Rev. John J. Buckley, pastor of St. Peter's Church.

SIDELIGHTS OF THE CONVENTION

Samuel Tiedal, one of the Wilson men, was speaking of an experience in soliciting support.

"I was just buttonholing 'em as fast as I could and putting it to 'em one after another in favor of Wilson. I grabbed 'em just as fast as they came up.

"To one fellow I got hold of I said: 'What's the matter with Wilson now? Don't you think he's a good man?'

"'Yes,' said the fellow, 'I think they're all good men. I think that's the case with every one of 'em.'

"'Oh, of course,' I said; 'all good, but it's a question of the best. This is a time when Democracy can't afford to put out any but her very best man in the field. A good man might be all right at another time, but it's different now. I want to tell you that Wilson——Hold on! What's your name?'

"'Ryan,' said he.

"'Ryan!'

"'Thomas F. Ryan.'

"I nearly sank through the floor; I hadn't known him from Adam. It was lucky I asked him before I talked any more. I didn't waste any more time after that."

"Oh, I am so excited!" exclaimed one little lady lunching at the Emerson. "I want to wear a lot of badges and be a regular politician."

A little later she was happily decorated with a red feather advertising a patented drink, a Clark button, a Wilson button and a little red rooster.

Baltimore women are enjoying the distinction of being outnumbered by the men—and they find it a trifle thrilling. Whether it is instinct or whether the location is the best for their purposes, they group under the church directory in the lobby of the Belvedere. It seems to represent the most conservative and protective corner in the place. But they don't read the directory.

George Pickett is prosecuting attorney of Shelby County, Kentucky, "the grandest county of the grandest State in the Union, sah," and he came breezing into the Emerson with a directoire walking stick five feet high. It is the only thing of the kind ever seen at a Democratic convention and it created a profound sensation.

"I didn't know there was anything set about it," explained Pickett. Lots of us carry 'em back home."

"The country is going to the dogs," ruthfully announced Major R. P. Delaney of Missouri, "when a Democrat can show up with a thing like that."

Perry Belmont is all sorts of a millionaire, but one incident that happened last week proved that he isn't above little human vanities.

A Washington paper had published a snapshot of Mrs. Belmont and herself walking to their carriage, and the picture made Mr. Belmont look very short beside his wife.

"Just look at that!" he exclaimed bitterly to several friends. "It's horrible. I am really about thirty feet behind Mrs. Belmont, and that's the reason I look two feet shorter than she is. I don't like it at all," and judging from his manner it would have given him deep and sincere pleasure to thrash the photographer who had been guilty of making the picture.

"Pretty good cigar; what's the name of it?" former Governor David R. Francis of Missouri asked the concierge of the lobby of the Emerson.

"That's a Bolt Special," was the reply. "Our Dave" thought it a joke until he looked at the band and then he threw the weed down in disgust.

"Give me something else, that thing's loaded," he said.

Mrs. May Arkwright Hutton, the feminine delegate from Washington, believes in being an individual, and she always signs her own name, and not her husband's, even though she describes the masculine partner as "the best ever. I have had him for twenty six years and have loved him better every year."

"But I am one individual and my husband is another," she explains.

Mrs. Hutton says that you can't vote under your husband's name in the suffrage States.

"By the way," she asked, "did you know that the women delegates to the Republican convention had masculine alternates?" And she wrinkled up her blue eyes in enjoyment over the struggle.

Former Governor Vardaman of Mississippi wears long hair of raven blackness, and his novel appearance attracts considerable attention in the hotel corridors.

"Who by that man?" asked George W. Miles, fish and game commissioner.

"That is ex-Governor Vardaman," Mr. Miles was told.

"Well, now you see how one can be mistaken. I thought he was a street faker, selling medicine, of a cure all. He ought to get his hair cut, anyhow."

In the final rush to secure admission to the convention hall all sorts of disguises are being adopted. Edward F. McSweeney for two days has been gravely passing back and forth with an usher's badge on his chest. The only thing he is really afraid of is that somebody will not only ask him to usher but demand that he do it. He already has had one experience in that direction. A delightful old Southern gentleman came up to him and showed him his section checks, asking for directions. "I am very sorry," said McSweeney, "but I am a stranger here." The old gentleman fumed. He wanted to know how the management explained the fact that the hall was full of ushers who apparently had no intention of doing their work. McSweeney agreed it was an outrage and would have gone further had he not suddenly realized that he had one of the badges on him and that he was one of the men being castigated.

The doubling and quadrupling of the Massachusetts men has been so pronounced because of scant hotel accommodations that one of the delegates was heard saying yesterday that he did not know as he would feel safe after this unless he was sleeping in a room with at least four. It was Jerry "Mac" of South Boston, who accompanied on this trip by his personal counsel, Ralph Stackpole of Canton, who said that the ability to sleep seven and eight in a room was the great distinguishing mark of the Democrats in convention assembled. "Tuk," said Jerry, "shows better than anything else the all-embracing human sympathy element in the Democratic party. In contrast to the haughty exclusiveness of a room and bath for one in the Republican gatherings."

Charles J. Barton of Melrose, formerly Mayor of that little city, is representing the free State of Arizona in the convention. Arizona was short a representation and went gunning around, and it was decided that Charles looked more like an Arizona man even than some who were born there. So he was invited in, and now he is practicing the coyote whoop for the emergencies.

A story is going the rounds of an adventure a Baltimore woman had last week when she went to inspect the armory. She had a card of admission, but the doorkeeper was making some difficulty about allowing her to get in, when a great burly-looking individual, of the size and general appearance to discourage an argument, stepped up and announced that the lady "is going in," whereupon she went.

He proved a most gallant guide, a portlive Chesterfield, as the Baltimore woman described him to her husband afterwards, "awfully nice," and she saw that armory from end to end.

"He told me to tell my husband that White of Tammany had shown me over the place," she repeated to her husband, who immediately impressed upon her the fact that she had been honored by Charley White, one of the greatest and best known prize fighters in the world.

"This is the first convention Baltimore has had in fifty-two years," boasted one of the leading citizens.

"In view of the short time you've had to prepare for it, we'll have to overlook some of the drawbacks," said "Tom" McAvoy, the Tammany leader.

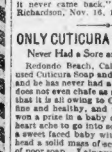
ITCHING RASH LIKE RINGWORMS
On Face and Arm in Scaly Masses. Pained and Burned. Got One Cake Cuticura Soap and Box Cuticura Ointment. Soon Entirely Well.



115 Pleasant St., Gloucester, Mass. — "About five years ago a rash began coming on my face and arm. It was itching and painful and caused to burn. Every time I scratched it, it would spread into circles like ringworms. My face and arms were in scaly masses and the skin was rough and red. It would keep me up nights. I tried several remedies but they did no good. Then I got one cake of Cuticura Soap and one box of Cuticura Ointment. I washed the sores and put the Cuticura Ointment on it and soon it was entirely well and it never came back." (Signed) Miss Viola Richardson, Nov. 16, 1911.

ONLY CUTICURA SOAP FOR BABY
Never Had a Sore and Does Not Chafe.
Redondo Beach, Calif. — "I have always used Cuticura Soap and no other for my baby and he has never had a sore of any kind. He does not even chafe as most babies do. I feel that it is all owing to Cuticura Soap for he is fine and healthy, and when five months old won a prize in a baby contest. It makes my heart ache to go into so many homes and see a sweet faced baby with the whole top of the head a solid mass of scurf, caused by the use of poor soap. I always recommend Cuticura, and time times out of ten the next time I see the mother she says 'Oh! I am so glad you told me of Cuticura.'" (Signed) Mrs. G. A. Selby, Jan. 15, 1911.
Cuticura Soap and Ointment sold everywhere. Sample of each mailed free. Address, "Cuticura," Dept. T, Boston. Tender-faced men should use Cuticura Soap Shaving Stick.

REFUSE GLOVER A REHEARING

CONCORD, N. H., June 28.—The Supreme Court today refused a rehearing of the suit brought by George W. Glover to break the will of his mother, Mrs. Mary Baker G. Eddy, in which she left her $2,000,000 estate to the Christian Science Church. The New Hampshire Court decided against Glover some time ago. Former Senator Chandler, representing Glover, filed a motion for a rehearing. This was denied today and ends the attempt to break the will in this State, and is a victory for the Christian Science Church trustees.

SOUTH BOSTON MAN SHOOTS WOMAN AND THEN KILLS SELF

BROCKTON, June 28.—Angered at her refusal to settle a judgment of $1,000 against himself, for $50, Joseph Vinskus, a South Boston bartender, shot and fatally wounded Miss Lucy Lukovich at her home here, and shot and killed himself.

Miss Lukovich's niece, Frances Lupertha, heard the screams and the shots. Terrified, she ran to the window of the room in which she was, threw it open and plunged headlong.

Her dress caught on some projecting corner of the window casing, ripped and there held fast, dangling her head down, twenty feet above the sidewalk.

Some people found a ladder over which they carried down Miss Lupertha, half dead with fright. The bodies lay in the room upstairs.

AVIATION MEET, SANCTION OR NOT

The third annual Boston aviation meet will be opened at Atlantic tomorrow as scheduled, despite the refusal of the Aero Club of America to sanction the event, promoters of the meet declared today.

Manager William A. F. Willard issued the following statement relative to this trouble:

"The management of the Boston aviation meet have come into conflict with the Aero Club of America and have decided to hold the meet without further consideration or consultation with the Aero Club. For the managers of the meet feel that the Aero Club is assuming unwarranted authority in its attempt to control the conduct of the meet—more particularly than it ever attempted to exercise over the other meets held in this city.

"The Boston managers have made satisfactory, legal contracts with all of the aviators who have been advertised to appear, and in doing this they feel that their business and legal responsibility ends. They are responsible for the business of the meet, not the Aero Club of America.

"The managers were willing to accede to all limitations imposed on the meet by the club rules, but when it came to turning over the business conduct of the meet to the Aero Club of America, they felt that that was an assumption of authority which could not be considered on the lines laid down by the Aero Club.

"Every financial responsibility of the Boston aviation meet has been met and provided for."

Sentence Bad Boys to Stay Home on the 4th

Five bad boys of Revere must stay at home all through July Fourth and on every Saturday till Labor Day. Such is the punishment ordered by Judge Samuel R. Cutler of Chelsea District Court.

The boys are a pretty downcast lot and are beginning to realize that boring auger holes in people's front doors is not ordinary mischief.

The names of the five boys are withheld because the purpose of the law is only to discipline juveniles, not to disgrace them. But they are known in Revere, especially to their playmates. All the other lads will know, then, these five don't show up on the Fourth or on Saturdays, just what the reason is.

The five offenders average twelve years of age. They live near Paul Revere park in Revere. With other lads they have been making great plans for the big bonfire and other fun which the town is arranging for the Fourth.

But these five, not contented with healthy fun, bored holes in the door of a dozen stores and dwellings along Broadway. They rained the doors, and, after a little police work, were rounded up.

ASKS POLICE TO FIND SON.

Superintendent Pierce of the police department has received a pathetic letter from the dying father of Henry Weinert, Jr., asking for help in locating the boy, who is missing from the home of his parents in Jersey City, and who is believed to be in Boston.

KATHERINE DUFFY, IN CONTEST FOR PRINCESS PRIZE

8 DAYS LEFT IN PRINCESS RACE

By THE PRINCESS EDITOR.

Eight days more for the contest!

The great "Princess" competition will end next week, Saturday, July 6. This means that it has only eight days more to run.

In the short space of a week and a day, the winner of the beautiful "Princess" outfit will be chosen by the people of New England. The winners of the 200 other prizes also will be selected.

Candidates are wasting little time now wondering what the others are doing. Each one is hustling for herself, trying to collect as many votes as possible.

Next Sunday's vote list is being impatiently awaited by all of the candidates. The list will contain the record of all votes received up to this morning at 11 a. m. It will also be the last list before the contest closes.

Next Monday, too, brings the last of the big five vote Sunday coupons. It takes only 200 Sunday coupons to make 1,000 votes and 1,000 votes are mighty important just now.

Life, energy and activity are being displayed by most of the candidates. Contestants who are doubtful about winning the capital prize are saying: "Well, there are 200 other fine prizes. If I don't win the Princess outfit, one of the delightful ocean voyages, with all expenses paid, will suit me first rate."

That's the right spirit!

You simply can't down if you will "speed up" your campaigns a wee bit.

All coupon votes received after tomorrow, June 29, will expire July 15. This allows one week after the contest closes in which to gather and turn in all coupons.

REQUEST NIGHT AT THE POP CONCERTS

The program is as follows: March, "Les Etudiants," Canne; overture, "Poet and Peasant," Suppe; waltz, "Fideles Wien," Ziehrer; selection, "The Pink Lady," Caryll; prelude to Act III, "Lohengrin," Wagner; (a) Large, Handel; violin (Mr. Krafft), harp (Mr. Schuecker), organ (Mr. Marshall); (b) organ solo, Mr. Marshall; ballet music, "La Gioconda," Ponchielli; march, "Pomp and Circumstance," Elgar; organ, Mr. Marshall; overture, "Tannhauser," Wagner; (a) Reverie, Hopekirk; (b) Gavotte, Gebhard; waltz, "Barcarolle," Waldteufel; march, "Boccaccio," Suppe.

TAFT GETS $2 FOR CONSCIENCE FUND

WASHINGTON, June 28.—A Kittery, Me., man who has been sending monthly contributions to the Federal treasury, has sent to President Taft a $2 bill for deposit in the conscience fund. "I am sorry to keep troubling you in this manner," he wrote, "but I am anxious that all money shall reach its proper destination, as it is close work saving it."

Bride-Elect Must Prove Health Good

WORCESTER, June 28.—Before wedding bells can ring for John R. Cartier, Jr., of Millbury a physician must examine his bride-elect and pronounce her physically sound.

Cartier, Jr., who is twenty, appealed for help to the Probate court, asking that his uncle, George E. Whitehead, be named as his temporary guardian. The young man said there is only one girl for him and his father refuses to consent to the marriage.

Judge William T. Forbes continued the petition. If the physician whom Attorney Thomas H. Sullivan, counsel for John R. Cartier, Sr., selects to examine the prospective bride, decides that she is not likely to lose her health, Cartier, Sr., will consent to the marriage, so he told Judge Forbes.

A slight halt in the step of the girl as indicating weakness, was the reason given by Cartier, Sr., for his refusal to consent to the marriage. Of the girl and her family he spoke highly. He said that his only desire is to save his son from a wife who would become an invalid and a burden to him.

CESTRIAN SAILS WITH BIG PASSENGER LIST AND A FULL CARGO

With a large passenger list and her holds full of cargo, the Cestrian of the Leyland Line sailed for London today.

A pack of thirty-two fox hounds, owned by Harry W. Smith of Worcester, who won master of fox hounds in one of the prominent Irish shows, will be taken across. The Cestrian also carried thirty-two horses and still retains the biggest shipment of livestock exported from Boston for several months.

On account of the strike among the London dock laborers the regular service to that port has been suspended, and the Cestrian was diverted on her way from New Orleans to the British metropolis and sent here to pick up passengers and some of the freight which has accumulated since the last sailing early in the month.

Except four passengers embarked at the Southern port and thirty-seven went aboard here. Among those sailing are Joseph A. Dominguez, ex-assistant district attorney, and Mrs. Dominguez, and the Rev. Joseph H. Tracy of Boston.

THIS is the day we celebrate. The Red Sox arrived this morning after their victorious Western trip.

They left Boston in second place on the night of Memorial Day, began with a slump in Cleveland and then went on and routed the White Sox out of first place. Since then they have gradually increased their lead, so that they are reasonably safe, barring accident. They have the Yankees here for six or seven games, and they ought to be able to show Harry Wolverton's Highlanders out of the way so easily that they will be able to go over to Philadelphia next week with a commanding lead in the race.

* * *

NEAL BALL, the ex-Cleveland infielder, who will be ready to jump into any position except first base, joins the team here; also Bill Smith, a youngster from Turners Falls, Mass., who is considered a left-handed "boy wonder." Jake Stahl needs port-side boxmen and he will give Smith a chance. Ray Collins seems to have rounded into form, and he expected to work in one of the games today.

* * *

MALSER has hopes of acquiring an Indian pitcher from the St. Joseph club of the Western League. His name is George Johnson, and several clubs have tried to land him. The White Sox and the Tigers have also had their scouts out for the aborigine, but Owner Hedrick of St. Joseph prefers Chief Comiskey and Boston may lose the chance to acquire the third "chief" in the big leagues, Bender and Meyers being the others.

THE White Sox are more in need of pitchers than the Red Sox are, anyway. But if "Chief" Johnson is the "live one" which western reports credit him with being, nobody can afford to overlook him.

* * *

THE Pilgrims departed hence for New York with an "almost win" to their credit. They were being roundly trimmed by the Brooklyn Dodgers yesterday when, in the eighth inning, everybody took a whack at the ball, five runs were made and the score was tied, eight even. They drove Knetzer out of business and "Nap" Rucker had little more success.

* * *

DICKSON batted freely in the opening and closing stages, went to pieces in the last inning, and the winning run was scored from two hits in a row by Smith and Daubert and a wild pitch. Campbell fielded Daubert's slam loosely, who advanced both Smith and Jake to third and second. There was a chance for a double play when Wheat unexpectedly lined to Sweeney, but nobody covered second base and Bill had to be content with the single out.

* * *

IN the last half of the ninth it looked like the Pilgrims would win after all. McDonald struck out, but Campbell singled. Dickson batted for Cheney and Sweeney walked. Kirke sacrificed, filling the bases. Hauser drove a hot one to right field that should have scored two runs, and won the game, but Titus, headed for second, collided with the ball and the game was over.

* * *

IT was an unmerciful turn of fate to lose a game that way, after pulling up in the eighth as the Pilgrims did. Had Campbell been as speedy and alert as usual the score would have been tied, and if Titus had not been hit by the batted ball the game would have been won.

* * *

IN this final game, Sweeney delivered five hits and walked once in six appearances at the plate, making an average of 1.000 for the day. One of the hits was a screaming triple. Campbell hit safely four times and walked once in six performances, one of his safe ones being a double. Titus, who is an excellent waiter and should head the batting list hereafter, drew four bases on balls, singled and doubled, also batting for 1.000. After striking out twice, Hauser singled twice and stole twice. The Pilgrims should have won the game on their hitting alone, driving out eighteen safe ones.

* * *

C. BRADLEY HOGG, whom Kling released to New Bedford in exchange for an infielder, began his career auspiciously. He shut out the Brockton team without a hit or a run. This gives a tip to the "fans," who suggest that the big league managers should grab every minor league pitcher who twirls a "no hit-no run" game. Hogg did not make good in big league company, but he immediately pitched one of those phenomenal games in the minors. They don't sting the ball in the minors like they do in the majors—also they fan for pitched balls that major league batters have been trained to avoid. You have to be particular about whom you serve up in the major leagues. The batters are persistent in demanding what they want and waiting until they get the right kind of goods.

RED SOX HOME IN FIRST PLACE

Five games in front of their nearest rival, and finishing the most triumphant western trip they have ever made, the Red Sox came into Boston today for the first time since they departed in second place on the night of Memorial Day.

They arrived early this morning on the Federal Express, prepared to play six or seven games with the New York Yankees, who have not yet beaten them in a single contest.

The conquering Red Sox will remain here until Tuesday night, when they will run over to Philadelphia for four days. After their engagement with the Athletics there they will come back, prepared to combat for a month.

Starting with a slump in the series with the Cleveland team, the Red Sox quickly picked up and came back to Boston with a record of seventeen games won and eight games lost. This is a little better than two in every three games played.

Boston greeted the victorious league leaders with a welcome worth while today. A great crowd went out to Fenway park to see the first double-header with the Yankees, which was scheduled to begin at 3 o'clock.

The team was preceded to Boston by Leslie Nunamaker, catcher, and Krug, the sensational young infielder who worked so successfully in the West until he was injured. Both men were on the invalid list. Jake Stahl himself has been ailing, but he came home with the team and hoped to be able to get into the game today. Harry Hooper returned with the men, and he, too, hoped to play today.

The Red sox arrived home with the record of having beaten every rival in the five different trips they took, except in the case of Washington—Clark Griffith's remarkable team having taken eight out of fifteen games from the Red Sox.

The Senators beat the Red Sox two of the four games played in Washington, all of them being twelve until the last, when the Red Sox led with a thud to the tune of 8 to 4. In yesterday's game, the Washington batch acquired a commanding lead off Charley Hall and Larry Pape was unable to stem the tide.

The stars of the western trip were Tris Speaker and Joe Wood, of course, but the rest of the team played with wonderful speed. Two men came home injured, and two returned ill. In the Washington series the team was crippled by the loss of Stahl and Hooper, and yesterday's defeat is partially due to that fact.

They will play another double-header with the Yankees tomorrow and it is possible that a third one will be arranged for Monday.

CREWS READY TO START BIG RACE

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., June 28.—The vanguard of the thousands coming for the time trig races of the intercollegiate regatta on the Hudson River tomorrow began arriving today. Early in the day Poughkeepsie began taking on its annual festive appearance with waving college colors and crowded hotels.

The morning weather was threatening, but this did not worry the coaches very much, for practice starts were the only number on the training program for the day.

That the big eight-oared event will be won by a burst of speed in the first quarter of a mile of the four-mile course is the opinion today of all the coaches. In other words, the real fight will start before the crack of the starting gun dies away.

The betting is light to date, but the following odds are being placed at the various betting quarters: Columbia 5 to 2 against the field; Syracuse 3 to 1 against the field; Wisconsin 8 to 1 against the field; Cornell 4 to 1 money against the field; Pennsylvania 12 to 1 against the field, while Leland Stanford held at 20 to 1 against the field.

In the four-oared race Cornell continued favorite at 1 to 2. Other odds quoted for the four-oared event were Syracuse 2 to 1, Columbia 4 to 1, Pennsylvania 8 to 1.

In the freshman eight-oared, Cornell ruled a 3 to 2 favorite, Syracuse 2 to 1, Columbia and Pennsylvania 4 to 1, and Wisconsin 5 to 1. Cornell men asked 7 to 2 in the betting that the Ithacans would sweep the field. Fifteen to 1 was asked that Syracuse would make a clean sweep, on Columbia 20 to 1 was demanded on clean sweep wagers.

Palzer and Wells Fight Tonight

Slugger Versus Boxer in Action

By JACK CONWAY.

A BIG international heavyweight battle will be decided at Madison Square Garden, New York, tonight. Bombardier Wells, heavyweight champion of England, and Al Palzer, one of the most promising of the American crop of white "hopes," are scheduled to clash in a twelve round bout. Needless to say the winner will challenge Jack Johnson, provided that the Galveston negro is successful in his Fourth of July encounter with Jim Flynn.

Neither Wells nor Palzer has done a great deal of work in the squared circle. Wells has been boxing for two years while Palzer first entered the ring as a professional last Summer. Both men are still "green" and have a lot to learn before they would have even an "outside" chance of winning the heavyweight title.

Wells is considered one of the best heavyweights that has been developed in England in years. He is a big fellow, being six feet three inches tall and weighing 195 pounds.

The Briton is extremely clever, is fast and shifty on his feet and is a fine ring general. His speed and skill may enable him to vanquish Palzer. Bombardier, however, isn't "cruel," like the majority of prominent boxers. He does not believe in battering his opponent around the ring in the hope of landing a K. O. punch when it is possible to win the decision on points.

When outside of the ring Wells looks more like a rah-rah boy than a professional boxer. The Briton has excellent manners, and is liked by all his associates.

Wells would not stand much of a chance of winning from Langford, McVey or Jeanette. Jim Flynn, too, would undoubtedly be able to lower the colors of the battler from the other side of the big pond. Wells, though tall and heavy, has a very small waist line, and it is believed that he would weaken under stiff body punishment.

PALZER'S style of fighting is opposite to that of Wells. Al is a rusher, a regular slam-bang sort of ring warrior. He is an ambitious fellow and is confident that he will ultimately be hailed as the king pin of the heavyweight division.

Palzer is a mighty puncher. He is the master of a wonderful right hand uppercut and if he connects, Wells is liable to go down for the count. When the powerful Iowa farmer got Al Kaufman, he landed his famous right hand uppercut in the fifth round. This proved the undoing of the Californian miner who went down for the fatal count.

When Palzer first started to box as a professional, he was under the management of Tom O'Rourke, the veteran New York fight promoter and manager. Al recently had a falling out with O'Rourke and he is now doing most of his own business. Palzer claims that he only had sixty dollars left after fighting for O'Rourke for a year.

Whether or not Palzer will be successful without O'Rourke at the helm directing affairs waits to be seen.

BOSTON SCHOOL CREW IN FORM

Final practice was given the Boston interscholastic eight on the Charles River Basin yesterday prep ratory to its annual race against Worcester English High on Lake Quinsigamond Wednesday afternoon.

Coach Manning had the boys report to the B. A. A. quarters at Cottage Farm bridge earlier than usual, and took them down the river as far as Harvard bridge, and on the way up stream the eight was tried out for its speed.

In this the boys displayed the form and judging from their work out, Worcester High will undoubtedly have a hard task to lead at the finish.

The average weight of the eight is 165 pounds. "Al" Tate and Ernest Searey of Boston Latin School, Wesley Coleman, captain of the eight, and H. A. McDonald of Hyde are exceptionally big for school boys. The strength of these boys will mean much for the Boston shell.

Brookline Schoolboy Signs With Cardinals

Jack Kelleher, the Brookline High School football and baseball player, has signed a contract to play third base for the St. Louis National League team, and left yesterday to join it.

Three or four weeks ago Manager Kling wrote a card for an amateur and it was understood that the Boston Nationals League manager did not offer that much money. Kelleher received a telegram offer from the Cardinals and accepted it.

Harry Deming of the Brookline High School pitching staff will join the Boston Nationals Tuesday morning and he showed up well when he worked with Kling. It is not known what offer Deming has received.

It's a Hard Life

NO 7—OH, DEAR! OH, DEAR ME!

By WEX JONES

THIS business of getting a job for the Summer is getting my goat.

I noted before in my autobiography that I got a job at the Hotel Hatteras being drowned every day to give the jolly college boys a chance to save me and earn Carnegie medals.

I didn't like the job anyway. I am a Yarvard man and the idea of being saved by a Quinceton piker doesn't appeal to me anyway. Moreover, I lost the job, so my feelings didn't have to be lacerated every day.

The job suggested another line to me—strance I hadn't thought of it before, since I'm not a good swimmer. But then I've noticed that if you're a good bookkeeper the only jobs open when you want one are those requiring a marine engineer, and if you're a marine engineer the only jobs open are to be found in Arizona.

From being drowned I thought I would turn to life saving myself. I knew there was nothing doing at the Hatteras, so I went to the Hotel Breakers—where so many Summer visitors go to get broke.

The boss said there never was any life saving to be done around his place, but that a bronzed lifeguard looked well as an ornamental adjunct to the bathing beach.

I assured the boss that I was bronzed.

"Maybe" he replied, "but I don't want a bronzed string bean hanging around my [illegible]

There were [illegible] words, but I finally got aided the boss to appoint me official lifeguard of the Breakers.

Hanging around a beach in a bathing suit always seemed to me an easy job, but just try it when you have to do it and do it all day. I don't believe now that a snake in a glass case has an easy job.

For a few days I was on the qui vive, but, as the boss had said drowning was decidedly unfashionable at the Breakers, and I couldn't get a chance to get into action. So I used to snooze in the sun most of the time.

Snoozing I was the fourth day when a piercing shriek rent the air

I jumped to my feet.

The shriek came from a woman bather

The water was only about three feet deep, but the shrieks became more frantic.

I waded out rapidly and returned, bearing the lady limply over my shoulder.

"My preserver!" she cried, clutching me around the neck.

"My hero!" she cried, clutching me tighter.

"I know I should meet my fate in some romantic way," breathed the lady in low, thrilling tones that might be heard across a city block.

I managed to disengage her arms from my neck.

A bathing suit is not much of an outfit for travelling, but it was all I wore as I silently left the Breakers on my third speed.

I may be hard up for a job, but I'm not taking one with marriage as a chaser.

Always Too Young to Boast

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

"LOVE is exactly like war in this—that a soldier, though he has escaped three weeks complete on Saturday night may, nevertheless, be shot, through his heart on Sunday morning."—Lawrence Sterne.

IT is not an uncommon thing for those on whom Cupid has spent no arrows to boast that they are invulnerable.

They are always too young to make that boast. Too young when the years have [illegible] their shoulders and powdered their heads.

It is no distinction to have escaped. To be incapable of emotion is so stultifying a mummy existence that those who have reached years of maturity and have never been "shot through the heart" have reason to be alarmed about themselves.

There is something lacking—sympathy, tenderness, charity, tolerance, hope, faith, or trust to dream.

Nothing to Boast of

Such a one should not boast. It is rather a matter to be regretted and remedied. It indicates a sickness of the [illegible] of the emotions.

It indicates a lack of stability to love; [illegible] has known love turn away.

[illegible] it to one's credit to have [illegible] once.

The heart doesn't die with humiliation at its first mistake. It lives to make another, and another, and that which is sometimes regarded as a "mistake" turns out to be the most beneficial and needful of experiences.

The mistake lies in carefully covering one's heart with frost, and then making the boast that it is invulnerable.

There never was a heart so fortified, so watched, so guarded and so closely sentineled that there was not some opening by which love could enter if he chose.

Always Some Way

Sympathy, [illegible] vanity, hope, who can say which exposes a point to a weakness in the [illegible]

There is some way to get in every into the hardest heart, if there were not, this would be a dreary place in which to live.

Summer Sneezes

By Dr. John Benner Huber

GOOD old Ben Franklin knew a thing or two; in fact, he knew a whole lot of things nobody else in his day and generation ever suspected, and he sensed some things that had to wait until a few years ago to be proved.

More than a century ago he observed that people caught cold from each other, and now we know the reason why—that germs play their part in most colds. It is therefore easy to understand how, as germs are always with us, season in and season out, we have Winter colds and spring colds (when the poet sings through his nose, "Oh, hello Spring!), and Summer colds and Autumnal colds (hay fever).

The temperature of the air has very little to do with "catching cold," except as it lowers the bodily resistance. Arctic explorers never catch cold while at or near the poles, but many of them do as soon as they get back to civilization, where the germs are. The cold air treatment is the ideal one for consumptives; these poor sufferers get well more surely in the Winter than in the Summer if they do as they are told. Monkeys are very consumptive creatures, and are very short-lived when confined in hot, stuffy menageries, but perish them on snow-drifts and they will live and thrive the regular span of a monkey's life.

So the common cold is generally an infection, and, being so, is catching.

And here, as in all infections, there have to be two main things to consider—the run-down condition of the body and the presence if the germs.

"Dodge such a citizen as you would an approaching creditor, until he has shaken his cold."

Summer colds are the meanest of all because they are so hard to get rid of, and it is [illegible] people somehow resent a cold in the good old Summer time, thinking of it as an affliction that should belong only to the snow months.

An Every Day Example.

Many people catch cold in June, when one day is hot and the next perhaps cool, even cold, and when the weather is apt to be windy, so that the germ-laden boring dust is scattered for every one to breathe in. Smith goes off for an outing on a warm Sunday, perspiring in a negligee and without a vest, and comes back for work when the temperature has gone way down. By this he gets chilled, which "predisposes" him to a cold—that is, he is now in a condition favorable to the growth and activity of germs in his body. Or women go to business on a warm morning in peeka boo shirt waists, to get home chilled from open cars; the germs will do the rest.

Or way off in Lonesomehurst Mr. and Mrs. Jones will dine of an evening with a friend—all in the leafy month of June June is one of the warm months, they think. So they take no wrap to cover up the evening gown, and Spring overcoat to shelter that Tuxedo. Next morning the sneezing begins, the nose gets stopped up, then follow headache, chilly and feverish sensations, pains in the back, heaviness in the bones and joints, that tired feeling the germs getting busy in the body. No matter which gets it first, one will catch it from the other in one hour here the mile in just as deadly as the [illegible] And both Mr. and Mrs. J. are in for a week's sniffling, if no worse.

Whenever anybody sneezes [illegible] or they ought to, "God bless you!" for the [illegible] with the sneeze certainly needs a blessing and the especial protection of Providence. The sneeze begins a cold, and the end of that cold is no trifling matter.

People say, "Nothing but a cold;" let it go at that and neglect it. But if you measure the neglected cold by its consequences you will find it one of the most serious ailments [illegible] not only to the individual sufferer, but to others as well; for colds, as we have noted, are catching, and there is no [illegible] denial of them.

For example, practically the whole force of an office, or a workshop, or a factory will be suffering from one case alone. If a workman comes into the office sneezing, taking thick and making a general nuisance of himself, better send him home until he is recovered, no matter at what sacrifice; it will be found the best in the end.

What a Cold May Do

There are several germs responsible for colds—the pneumonia germ for one; the catarrh, the influenza, the bronchitis germs, and so on. They grow in the lining of the nose and throat; and when our bodies are predisposed to their development by being first heated and then chilled, or by overwork, or by working in stuffy, germladen, ill-ventilated rooms, or by any cause that lowers the health and reduces the vitality—then the activity of the germs is represented by inflammation, with the symptoms stated, and with which everybody is more or less familiar.

Catarrh is a chronic cold, hard indeed to get rid of, and finding much too often in such diseases as pneumonia and consumption. Catarrh makes the membranes of the upper air passages unhealthy and thus a fruitful soil for the germs of diphtheria, measles, meningitis, infantile paralysis and what not else. Pretty much all deafness comes from catarrh.

So get rid of a cold, to Summer as to Winter, and as soon as you can. How?

By leading the physiological life for one thing. Go to bed early and sleep at least eight hours; get up in good time; bathe well. Eat three meals of wholesome food a day, and don't rush about it. Be in the fresh air all the time day and night. Have the shop and the office always well-ventilated; avoid dusty, damp and foul air.

Be very moderate in the use of alcohol and tobacco. Better by far have nothing at all to do with alcohol in the Summer. It dilates the capillaries of the skin, and thus chilling of the body is easy.

Tobacco is no preventive of catarrh; it increases catarrh by irritating the upper air passages. No doctor can ever cure your catarrh while you smoke.

Excessive tea drinking is as bad for women as alcoholism is for men. Tea, the tipple of women, should be taken always freshly made in moderation, and never without a bite of food.

Wear suitable underclothing, thin in the Summer. Wear always warm footwear and stout, watertight shoes. Never get your feet wet, nor your extremities cold. Put your chest protector on your chest. Cover your chest, of course, but do so much as to impede breathing upon which good health ever depends.

Plenty of Air

Sleep always with the windows open; but avoid draughts—by means of screens, or of a clothes horse covered with a shawl or a blanket.

Both overeating and eating indigestible foods and too much sugar and starches tend to colds. Children may keep up troublesome catarrhs by eating too much sweets, although a moderate amount of pure candy is good for a child. Regulate a child's digestion, and it won't have to blow its nose so much.

If catarrhs and unhealthy throats are not cured, worse may come. Adenoids and enlarged tonsils must be removed in children.

Always breathe through the nose. Some people think the mouth is for breathing, but this is a mistake in theory. Besides, the mouth breather looks neither handsome nor pretty. Inside the nose the air is warmed, as it should be, for its passage into the lungs.

Never eat without having first washed your hands and got rid of whatever germs may be on them. Keep your hands away from your face as much as possible—your whole face, including the mouth and nose. Don't borrow pencils or books or anything else (not even the fountain pen after having cured them) from anyone with a cold; don't touch solid handkerchiefs, or use public drinking cups or stand near anyone who is coughing and sneezing. Dodge such a citizen as you would an approaching creditor—until he has shaken his cold.

Keep your teeth always clean, kill kinds of germs by using [illegible] Remember I once knew a citizen who had twenty-six varieties of germs in his [illegible] and he now he has developed some fifty-seven varieties [illegible] that is, if he is still above ground.

If you think a cold is coming on, douche your nose by means of a nose cup (to be got in any drug store), using a solution of half a teaspoonful of salt to a tumblerful of water as hot as can be borne, then gargle your mouth with the solution. Swallow five grains of quinine, and then don't think anything more about it. Worry that killed a cat can develop a cold.

A Mysterious Disappearance

One of the Greatest Detective Stories Ever Written

By Gordon Holmes

TODAY'S INSTALMENT

Copyright, 1905, by Edward J. Clode.

THIS ill-advised authentic statement only fanned the flame. An evening journal got hold of the proceedings at the Putney Coroner's Court, which inquired into the death of a woman found in the Thames, and, with a portentous display of headlines, published an interview with the doctor giving particulars of the iron spike found imbedded in the skull.

The paper was also able to state "on the best authority" that at this inquest Sir Charles Dyke and the missing lady's personal maid were called to identify the body, but failed.

A first-class sensation was in full swing and threatened to reach the question stage in the House of Commons when Bruce took hold of affairs.

He went to Sir Charles Dyke's solicitors, and induced them to send out the following authoritative communication to the press:

"Much unnecessary pain is being caused to Sir Charles Dyke and to the relatives of his late wife by the comments which have appeared in many newspapers regarding Lady Dyke's death. Her ladyship left her home on November 6th to pay a visit to her sister at Richmond, and since that date has not been seen or heard of. There was no possible reason for her disappearance. After a long and agonizing search, her husband and relatives have come to the conclusion that she met with some accident on the date named, with the result that her identity was not established, and she was probably buried from some hospital or other institution long before her friends seriously entertained the thought that she was dead. Every such case of accidental death followed by the interment of unknown persons by the authorities, occurring on or about November 6th, has since been rigidly investigated, but no definite trace has been found of the missing lady. Sir Charles Dyke determined to take the public step of announcing his wife's death in the hope that any hitherto undiscovered clew might thereby come to light. But there are no grounds to suppose that any other explanation of the occurrence than that given will be forthcoming. The investigation has been in the hands of Scotland Yard throughout, so no good purpose can be served by further discussion in the press of what is now, and threatens to remain, a mystery rendered more complex by the simplicity of its leading features."

Several newspapers, of course, pointed out that they were helping forward the inquiry by noising it abroad, but thenceforth the paragraphs ceased, being eclipsed in interest by the revelations of a great divorce case in which there were no less than six titled co-respondents.

White Is Puzzled

One man was much puzzled by the original obituary notice and the semi-official statement supplied by the solicitors.

Mr. White did not know what to make of them. He guessed that Bruce had inspired that "explanation," and he read the concluding sentence many times.

"It threatens to remain a mystery, does it not?" he murmured. "Just wait, Mr. Bruce, until I lay my hands on Corbett. Clever as you are, I think I will show you that Scotland Yard can occasionally get the better of your theories. Anyhow, Corbett will have to be very explicit about his movements before I am satisfied that he knows nothing about this business."

He had written to the chief of police at Cheyenne, and something definite would soon come to hand.

Nevertheless, he felt somewhat shaken in his diagnosis of the crime. Wyoming was a long way from London, and the letter from Corbett, which he had in his possession, did not exactly confirm his suspicion that this man was concerned in the murder of Lady Dyke.

He quickly became aware of Mrs. Hillmer's departure, and at once jumped to the conclusion that she had recently left England for the United States. A close scrutiny of the passenger lists at Liverpool and Southampton did not help him much, and he ultimately resolved to call on Bruce, in the hope that a chance exclamation might reveal the barrister's opinion of the situation.

Claude was not at a loss to account for Mr. White's presence.

"I expected you," he said.

"Really, now, may I ask why, sir?"

"Because you have missed Mrs. Hillmer, and you want me to help you find where she has gone, and why?"

The detective smiled.

"I won't say that you are wrong, sir," he cried. "In these affairs it is always well to keep an eye on the woman, you know."

"When did Mrs. Hillmer leave Raleigh Mansions?"

"On the 20th."

"It is now February 3. Four days ago, eh?"

"That is the time. She might have left by the American line from Southampton or the Cunard from Liverpool on Wednesday, but she did not, and no one answering to her description is booked by the White Star tomorrow."

"Southampton! Liverpool! Do you think she has gone to America?"

"Where else? She's in league with Corbett, somehow, of that I am certain, and I think that the Monte Carlo address was a mere blind—a clever one, too, as it even deceived you, Mr. Bruce."

"Yes. It did deceive me."

"Then why are you so surprised at the suggestion that the lady should attempt to cross the Atlantic?"

"Because I have not your rapid perception of the points of the case."

"That's your way of pulling my leg, Mr. Bruce."

The barrister smiled.

Mrs. Hillmer, of course, had gone to Monte Carlo. Once there she would have little difficulty in tracing the White Heather, and overtaking Mensmore.

To Warn Him

She would warn him of the police pursuit, and there would be a scene between them.

How would it result? Would Mensmore, guilty, seek safety in flight? Would he, innocent, return to London and demand to be confronted with his accusers?

For the life of him, Bruce could not say positively. Yet he felt the situation was too delicate to be dealt with by Mr. White's bludgeon methods, and he forebore to speak.

The detective interpreted his silence as an admission of inability to find a satisfactory explanation of Mrs. Hillmer's absence.

He went on:

"Corbett is not at Monte Carlo."

"So I imagined."

"Well, it is a fact. The police have made constant inquiries for him at the Hotel du Cercle and elsewhere. Not the slightest trace of him can be found."

The Gift of Loving

By WINIFRED BLACK

"SWEET are the dew on the roses,
Sweet is the flowers of Spring;
Sweet are the dew on the roses,
Says the po' gyurl that nobody loo-o-oves."

I heard the man who can play the "Hare and Hounds" on the guitar with the blade of his pocketknife singing as he swept the porch early this morning, and that is what he sang.

So you see you are not the only one who is starving for affection.

Laugh at you! Not I. I'd as soon laugh at the forlorn little who threw her puny arms around my neck at the orphan asylum the other day and tried to make me say I was her really, truly mamma.

Funny? There's nothing funny about loneliness, nothing amusing in a sad heart. I think you are pitiful and I do wish there was some way to help you, but there isn't—not much of a way—for what you want.

The poor, narrow-shouldered creature you're married can't give you bread when you ask for it; maybe he would if he could, but he can't, so he gives you the nearest thing to it he has—and thinks he has done all that is required of him.

It is not given to everyone, the gift of loving. It is a gift, a great and noble gift; as much a talent as any of the other things we call genius.

It takes a big heart to know how to love, and a big soul, too. Be thankful that you have the great gift. Enjoy it to the full, but don't waste it. Don't throw it away on a poor, half-blind, half-deaf, half-alive creature who can't appreciate you and what you are trying to give him.

Another man? Nonsense. You're a good woman and a sensible one. Why should you throw away your life completely just because the poor, stingy hearted creature you have married can't see what he is losing. Don't lose your life through your gift of loving. Save it.

How? Begin with that little girl of yours. She is cold and undemonstrative, too. You may teach her to be different.

Just take that poor little pinch-starved nature right into the warmth of your big heart and she'll warm up in spite of herself.

That little soul around the corner. She came to town from the mountains of Tennessee. She's homesick and lonesome. Get acquainted with her. Be a friend to her.

How about that girl who's trying to make her way alone in the big city where she is so friendless. She has a place in one of the big shops. Pretty thing, isn't she. Can't you help keep them innocent.

There's a boy in the flat just below you, a rather stupid, awkward fellow—all hands and feet. He's so lonesome and forlorn he has to whistle every minute to keep up his courage. Why don't you help him a little?

He's saving every cent he can rake and scrape to send his little sister to school. Get him to show you her picture and tell you how much she is and how she's doing at school.

Did you see that old man waiting on the steps for the postmen today? His son is $11 down south somewhere and he's worried about him. Couldn't you cheer him up a bit?

The world is full of love and of life, and of interesting things, and human, sensible, loving, feeling people. Make some of them sing.

"Sweet is the dew on the roses," says the po' gyurl that nobody loves. Do you know who is more to be pitied than the po' gyurl that nobody loves? I'll tell you. The poor girl who loves nobody—that's the real poverty.

Don't let that happen to you.

Fresh Air

Did You Ever Meet This Woman?

"COME right out on the back porch," called the stout woman to her caller. "I'm so glad it's warm enough to sit outdoors—it's so good for the health! Yes, I do have a view from here of everybody's backyard and the rear of all the other flats, but I pay as little attention to other people's business that it makes no difference to me really.

"I suppose there are women who would take advantage of the situation to keep track of all their neighbors' affairs, but, thank goodness, I'm not that way! I just like to sit here and enjoy the sunshine and fresh air—Willie! Willie-e-e Jones! Stop chasing that poor cat! If your mother saw you I know she'd spank you!

"That is the worst boy I ever saw in all my life, Mrs. Chipman. I can't imagine what kind of bringing up he has. I'm sure you can judge what a child's home is like by his actions, and I must say if he's a fair sample I don't think much of it. His people, you know, they live in that third flat over there—the one with the rug hanging out to air. It looks like an Oriental rug from here, but I don't believe it is. I don't think the Joneses can afford Oriental rugs, for the grocery wagon from the second corner down the street brings their things and that grocery is the cheapest place around here. If people buy cheap things to eat it shows very plainly what they are.

"Mrs. Jones comes out back there, and the way she scolds the delivery boys is a caution. I know she dyes her hair, because no woman with a twelve-year-old child has that glittery gold hair naturally. And her husband looks like a regular stick. Every Sunday morning he hangs all his clothes out to air and brushes them. Don't you hate to see a man do those effeminate things? I suppose that Mrs. Jones is too lazy to do them, so he has to.

So Nervous

"My goodness! I'm glad Mrs. Smith has taken in that rubber plant—up there on the fourth floor! I've been so nervous all day, expecting it to topple off that edge and kill somebody or other going through the alley beneath.

"She's the most hysterical creature—a bride, yes. And she has no more idea about how to run a house than—then Willie Jones! She sets her plants out on the edge of the porch and the wind whistles around there and blows all the leaves off. Then she waters them and lets the water drip down below, and that makes the other tenants so mad!

"The Smiths seem to think because they are on the top floor they are invisible. Why, her husband comes out and puts his arm around her right in public. I saw him kiss her, too. I'm always suspicious of married folks who are affectionate before other people, aren't you? I don't think they can be anybody much because their wedding presents don't make any great show.

"Her trousseau—no, I haven't been there, but she hung her parlor sash out one day and I know exactly where she got it last Winter—Sutton's marktown sale, $21.90. I happened to go shopping with a cousin from the country, that's how I know. My cousin wouldn't buy one of the suits because they looked so dreadfully cheap.

"The Smith's table linen is just ordinary, too, and she hasn't any embroidered dresser scarf to her name—at least none ever is hung out to dry on her wash-day.

"I think that fat over there is a sort of bachelor apartment. There never is any one around daytimes except a servant, and at night—maybe they don't whoop it up! You can't tell me they don't play poker when all the lights are going at 3 o'clock in the morning! And you can hear things clink clear across where we are. Oh, I had to get a drink of water one night—that is how I happened to know what was going on in that apartment at that time.

Predicts a Divorce

"You can't tell me there won't be a divorce in the James family before long. No, that's their house over there, the one with the vinegar window curtains in the back and all the display to the front. He is perfectly bridled to him, avoids and fusses, and she weeps all over the place all the time.

"No, you can't exactly see in from the here, but I bet the opera glasses one day, looking to see if there were any wild geese or ducks flying north—sign of Spring, you know—and I accidentally happened to sweep their windows. My dear, he picked up the hair brush and for a minute I thought he was going to throw it at her. Think of living in the same house with a man like that!

"There goes the grocery boy for the third time today to the Grahams. And he just escaping from bankruptcy a little while ago! I suppose her extravagances drove him to it. You'd think she'd spend some time looking to see what was in the refrigerator and planning to save instead of eternally shampooing her hair and manicuring on the back porch as she does! All she thinks of is her looks, and they aren't so much. I've seen her cook throw half a loaf of perfectly good bread at a time into the garbage can! I—

"What? You don't have to be going so soon, do you? I'm so glad to have had this little visit from you! Run over any time you want a little sunshine and fresh air on my porch! It is such a restful place."

TALK SHOOTING IN DARROW TRIAL

LOS ANGELES, June 28.—Clarence S. Darrow was for the first time charged personally with offering a bribe to turn over to him certain evidence against the McNamara brothers.

Attorney Rogers of the defense asked the court for protection against Detectives Burns and Biddinger, whom he charged with applying epithets to him in an anteroom.

Threats were exchanged in open court by Rogers and Biddinger and both offered to "shoot it out." Burns was ordered to leave the courtroom until he was called as a witness.

Ortie McManigal, principal witness for the prosecution in the dynamiting cases, testified that at a meeting in Chicago Darrow offered him $5,000 if he would "forget" the conversation on the train when James B. McNamara, when McNamara had practically admitted guilt as to the Times disaster, and had offered Biddinger $50,000 to let him go.

The offer by Darrow, according to Biddinger, was repeated by the latter at the fleeing acceptance, Biddinger said he was given by Darrow $500. The money was produced in evidence by the district attorney. A week later in San Francisco Darrow gave him $500, said Biddinger.

Biddinger testified that Darrow was eager to get possession of the evidence of the McNamaras. Darrow, he said, said if it could not be arranged to have some of his boys kill Biddinger on the train and get evidence when Biddinger was on his way out with it from Chicago. He told Darrow, he said, that he would not kill know when he left Chicago with the evidence.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS; FINANCIAL NEWS

Copper Shares Sell Lower in an Active Market

By W. H. ROSS.

STATE STREET, June 28.—Midday:—There was activity to the Boston market this morning, but it was weaker. The decline in the price of copper metal in London was a depressing factor. The trend of the New York market was another.

Among coppers to decline here were Calumet & Arizona, Granby, Superior & Boston, Amalgamated, all of Calumet & Hecla. Butte & Superior was a weak feature of the first hour, going down more than a point.

President Wolvin of the Butte & Superior visited Hayden, Stone & Co. from the property yesterday. Mill performance for the twenty-four hours ending at 2 this afternoon as follows:—Tons of ore treated, 420; assay by independent chemist here in Butte, mill heads 21.3 per cent., mill tails 3 per cent., concentrates 52 per cent., recovery 91 per cent."

It is reported that recent sealing of Butte & Superior has been largely from Butte, and it is believed Senator Clark and his friends have now disposed of all their shares in this company.

Copper exports for the week ending yesterday totalled 4,115 tons, a decrease of 1,265 compared with the same one last year.

New York Market Is Unsteady.

The New York market opened weak and the best that can be said of it subsequently is that it was unsteady. Recent events at the Baltimore convention were seized upon by bears in an attempt to produce a reaction. The most that was accomplished was fractional recessions at the start in the price of a number of the usual market leaders. The pressure was far from being heavy.

Short interests being well covered, there was less demand for Steel, which opened a little lower and then descended further. There was considerable selling of sugars, and Amalgamated and American Smelting sustained losses. A London rally for Canadian Pacific helped that issue in New York. General Electric was a strong specialty, going up more than a point on recurrent talk about dividend prospects.

American railway shares were irregular in the London market, where copper metal took a considerable drop, spot being quoted 16s. 3d. lower and futures being off 15s.

Slack Demand for Copper.

The demand for copper metal in spots ruled slack, but producers and sellers are holding firm for the full market price. More demand for spot copper is expected within a week. The present dullness of the market is attributed to some extent to a desire on the part of consumers to learn through the Copper Producers' Association's report the exact status of the supply.

Lewisohn Brothers say: "Copper situation seems by Thompson, Towle & Company read as follows:

Thomas F. Cole, in a recent Western interview, states that in his opinion, copper is selling too high, that the price should not be above 16½c, and that the producers and consumers should get together and meet the situation with a steadying influence of regulation.

"A man connected with one of the largest of the selling agencies and who is supposed to be well informed on general conditions, says: 'We are now low on copper and are practically out of the account of the metal. This condition is much the same with the plain wire mills. We have been in position to know the consumption of copper and the supply of copper on hand in the various refineries.

Steel Prices Going Up.

A Pittsburgh dispatch says that big consumers now expect a further advance in the price of steel products and are hurrying to place orders at the present rates. The steel industry, in fact, is remarkably active for this time of the year. It is stated that orders received by steel manufacturers within recent days indicate beyond all doubt that the price advance is justified by conditions. Indications that a recurrence of the following business is in favor of the coming month are found in the fact that a decrease in orders is looked for at this season, as big consumers get demands for the immediate future contracted for. Steel rail mills are booked up for eight weeks behind in deliveries and consumption is exceeding production.

Owing to the low prices at which orders were accepted in the Winter and Spring, the earnings of steel companies have been very low in proportion to the volume of business done. Even with the United States Steel Corporation for the first half of 1912 we did not exhibit earnings of $42,000,000. Most of the low prices were accepted before the present high level of materials and then profits of manufacturers will be doubled when present steel products are still from $2 to $6 a ton below current prices.

Financial News in Brief.

The Exchange Trust Company has been appointed transfer agents for the Barnstable Water Company, the Norton Water Company, the Plainville Water Company and the International Underwriting Company and the Iron Cap Copper Company.

It is called from London that the Canadian Pacific Railway will pay the Grand Trunk $1,000,000 cash to establish the bush line of the world communication independently of cable service.

It is expected that the Chicago & Alton road will expend about $2,000,000 in the next year. It will expend about $2,000,000 in the next year and part of that sum will be provided from the sale of $4,500,000 of the new 4 per cent. bonds. The road has authority for a $20,000,000 issue of this kind. Nothing is definite as yet, however, about the financing plans of the present road.

Regarding the Massachusetts Gas Companies, Bird & Co. say in a circular: "With increases in population and in the density of the existing population, continue to become larger and more stable. From 1902 to 1911 the total number of gas paying passengers carried increased from 115,621,184 to 329,918,936, and in the same year the gas population of the districts served to estimated 2,500,000. During the last ten years 405,321 has been expended upon the properties, the cost of which has been charged to capital and in 1911 $332,000 was paid out from surplus earnings. This is equal to 13 per cent. of the state of efficiency.

Frederick Nelson, who has been engaged as manager for the Boston Elevated Railway Company since 1897, has been appointed vice-president and director of the corporation, was elected president of the National Refining Company for nine years and for the past two years of the Cities Service Company. He has been in the railway business for thirty-four years and all but ranks with the best railway men in the business.

Interest will not be paid on July 1 by the Massachusetts Gas Companies on its 4 per cent. and 4 per cent. refunding bonds, but will be paid on July 15. The reason is that the company is business is improving and because it desires to save interest. The receivership is authorized to give more than 30 days' notice of redemption of bonds called for payment.

Canada is reported to be in need of iron and steel and it is expected that its consumption of these products for the next year will be greatly increased during the business year. The 1911 importation of iron and steel products was valued at $90,000,000 and the 1912 importation will be greatly increased over those of the previous year.

The Missouri, Kansas & Texas road is preparing for more business by buying locomotives. Crop prospects along its lines are good and all all signs point to more prosperity for Kansas.

The Pennsylvania Steel Company is the latest of the big concerns to put up the price of steel products. It has advanced its price for bars and shapes from $1 a ton and is asking 32 more for billets.

In their special stock, bank and trust company issue for July, Tucker, Anthony & Company say:

The enlarged inquiry for the better class of regular dividend paying stocks—those of well-known and successful industrial corporations—has rarely come to light in the past to the extent of the closest students of investment principles and investment possibilities. No better or stronger testimony supporting this view could possibly be had than that given by the prospering market for these securities. The buying is for investors and not for speculation. The large and small amounts and has developed proportions that are actually surprising.

It is said that in 1911 Pennsylvania road holdings of Norfolk & Western were increased 182,000 and it is understood that the former road and its associates own about 47 per cent. of Norfolk & Western stock.

In the 1911 fiscal year the New York, Ontario & Western road earned a net on the 7 per cent. preferred stock of the road for a small amount. During this fiscal year the net earnings have been decreased by the coal mining suspension and are not holding in the black. The dividend is not. The New York, New Haven & Hartford controls the Ontario & Western and on a 7 per cent. dividend rate should obtain $80,000 annually for the first full year in which F. W. Woolworth Company stock was traded in on the New York Exchange transactions totaled 92,000 shares. For the last ten days in which it was dealt in on the Curb it was 9,435.

The All-Night Session at Baltimore

BALTIMORE, June 28.—The only event of yesterday was the evidence of a combination between the Bryan and the Wilson forces and a decided victory for them in the ballot, which gave to the Bryan and Wilson side 633½ votes against 437 on the side of Champ Clark.

The exact meaning of this vote, in which Murphy took his solid bunch of New York delegates over to the Wilson camp and in which a number of Champ Clark delegates apparently deserted, is unknown.

The general impression is that Bryan, using Woodrow Wilson as his stalking horse, has played extremely good politics and that, beginning on Tuesday with a vote that went against him almost a hundred, he has succeeded in reversing the arrangement and winning by nearly a hundred in the last rollcall before the nomination.

The Ironclad Bosses.

Some of the nitrs wise believe that the apparent majority with Bryan and Wilson represent deep and cunning scheming and plotting by the three ironclad bosses, Murphy, Sullivan and Taggart.

Those who are good at imagining imagine that these men allowed Bryan to win on this unimportant rollcall in order to confuse him or deceive him, or for some other reason. But to the ordinary citizen it looked as though Bryan's ability as a politician had brought into camp those that he needed.

Here, briefly, is the story of yesterday's convention up to the beginning of the second session:

Just now the New York delegation is "caucusing" in a room in the Emerson Hotel. This so-called "caucus," held just before the convention assembles for the nominating speeches, is really a session in which Murphy tells what the solid ninety are to do.

Bands are playing, and a few feeble processions are filling the streets.

The convention assembled at noon. Mrs. Taft, wife of the President, was sitting in the front row of the gallery. She watched the proceedings, followed while Ollie James denounced her husband as the great enemy of this glorious people.

Demonstration for Wilson.

Mr. James talked so loud and so fiercely that it is probable that Mrs. Taft, a simple, quiet little woman, in a very plain white dress, hardly heard or knew what he was saying.

The regular demonstration started with Wilson's name at 2 o'clock. Governor Dewey of Michigan, who never wore shoes until he was fourteen, and who now wears patent leathers and curly locks, had just asked some sarcastic questions.

Something was said about Wilson, and the Wilson agitators started at once with great energy on evidently managed demonstrations.

Flashlights explode, dozens of them in succession, as the demonstration proceeded.

The various candidates received a certain amount of cheering and yelling during twenty-five minutes of noise—many banners were carried.

One showed this: "Champ Clark—Our Next President." Some New York delegates sitting down—all the delegates but the New York ninety—on their feet—held up a Clark banner, inscribed: "Who Outlet Our Party? Champ Clark."

There was a large silk banner for Baldwin, of Connecticut, one for Underwood, and one for Harmon.

But the Wilson men were the ones that really attracted attention.

One of the most intelligent had brought a collapsing fishing pole. This he fastened together until it was twenty feet or more long, then proudly paraded, carrying a Wilson picture on the end of the fishing pole.

"Give Us Wilson."

There were a half dozen banners of this type, "Give Us Wilson and We Will Give You Wisconsin;" "Give Us Wilson, We Will Give You Pennsylvania," etc. Another one read, "New York, Wilson and Win."

Mrs. Harry Clemens, wife of a delegate from Hamilton, Kansas, tried to climb on the platform and start a demonstration of her own for Champ Clark.

About 100 young men in the gallery, apparently college men, swayed back and forth like a boat pulling for the soon.

The hall was dangerously packed, five or six thousand people too many having been admitted. A panic there would be rather serious.

Murphy was hissed again during the rollcall, but the hissing changed to cheers when, on this occasion he gave his ninety New York votes to Bryan and Wilson.

Bryan, including Thomas F. Ryan, gave the ninety-four votes to Bryan and Wilson.

Ollie James was announced as permanent chairman.

He made a speech demanding free sugar and free lumber, an income tax and general progressiveness. He said "John D. Rockefeller pays no more to support the Republic than a ditch digger," and then he attacked T. R. and Taft alike.

Is Now Rapa T. R.

He told T. R. that instead of going to Africa he should have hunted wild beasts in Wall Street, where the people are oppressed.

He said: "Roosevelt says Taft is a friend of the trusts and Taft says Roosevelt is a friend of the trusts. And I believe that both told the truth."

He praised Bryan twice and was loudly cheered each time.

La Follette walked in to see what was going on and instantly the convention adjourned to 8 p. m.

The evening's excitement began at five minutes of 8 with the appearance of Bryan on the platform. It seemed not much surprised at his popularity. At the same time Gene Sise, the blind senator from Oklahoma, came in and Mrs. Taft appeared in her seat. She was dressed in a suit of dark purple linen very sensible.

The hall was packed.

The band played the "Star Spangled Banner."

Everybody stood up. The band stopped. Everybody sat down.

The question is what is to happen to that "boom" dawg" this evening and what News will go from here to Armageddon, the battling Bull Moose and the rest of the country.

Some tell you T. R. won't run if Bryan is nominated because one of a kind is enough. Others will tell you Wall Street, depressed by the alternative pet lamb candidate, now hopes for Bryan nomination because Ellihu Root could get a nomination would mean [illegible]

...r News.

...e willing to listen you can hear anything and everything, in doing the weird leaps that all observers ...kinmakes the delegates and the nomination will go to Gaynor.

Murphy sits in his seat, tucking only the smile to be Fourteenth street's silliest.

T. F. Ryan is in his seat. He probably knows what his brachycephalic bosses Murphy and Sullivan—will do or try to do. That is [illegible] knows if they know.

There is possibility of a deadlock and of failure to nominate at all. But the two big changes in the last two rollcalls indicate that some one has a plan that is going through.

The band at 8.10 played "Take a Little Tip from Father." Who is father in this convention? That's the question. The opening gavel has not yet been heard, although it is but ten minutes overdue.

8.15—The gavel is heard and Ross Stevenson prays for the Democrats and all others. The audience stands.

Mr. Stevenson's prayer is for general good conduct apart from politics. He hopes that the people have habitually elected "men of truth, big consciousness." He prays that each candidate may rise above self-seeking and pray for government of the people, by the people, for the people.

After the prayer there was some disturbance while a delegate complains because the police kept out delegates. Bogus ticket purchasers crowded the hall all day and bearers of good tickets have been turned away. This happened also in Chicago. A thriving business has been done by the doorkeepers and others.

Ollie James, presiding with a voice bigger than Parker's, ordered aisles cleared, doors closed, only late delegates to be admitted.

Now Bryan is up, raising his hand in the old way. It is just begun 8.21 and this Democratic pickle or battle has begun.

Bryan has a resolution which he thinks should be considered at once before starting to nominate. He wants unanimous consent and gets it, in spite of one feeble "no."

Bryan's resolution requires to send greetings to the people of the United States in this crisis and assures the people that the fundamentals of Jefferson and Jackson is still the people's creed, and pledges not to support any candidate representing J. Pierpont Morgan, Thomas F. Ryan, August Belmont—here the cheers stopped Bryan. He goes on demanding the withdrawal from this convention of any delegate representing the above named interests.

Yells at this, for Ryan and Belmont sit on the floor as delegates, and it is an invitation to the convention to put them out.

Howls and Applause.

It is Bryan's announcement that he exercises—or proposes to exercise here—the functions exercised by Mr. Peter above objections and howls of applause.

Will the convention vote to put out the two men? Bryan asks for a decision on his resolution.

Everybody expected Bryan to do something
